Scant Hope Of Immediate Peace, Says President

Declares Welles Found Chance Slim, Made No Proposal And Received None

The War Today

SOVIET PREMIER MOLOTOFF, in a speech to the Supreme Soviet, declared Russia desires to remain neutral but warned the Allies of danger in massing troops in the Near East. Page 4.

BRITISH-RUSSIAN relations were chilled when it was announced in London that two recently confiscated Soviet freighters, seized by British in the Far East, had been turned over to the French. Page 5.

FOREIGN TROOPS are on the alert for trouble in Shanghai today when Japan inaugurates the new puppet Chinese government at Nanking. Train bearing officials to inauguration was derailed probably by Chinese guerrillas. Page 5.

Optimistic Note

President Roosevelt, conceding yesterday that Sumner Welles' trip to Europe had shown "scant immediate prospect" for a just and lasting peace, emphasized that it is impossible to tell from day to day what will develop to alter the prospect.

At the same time, the President stressed that the information which the Undersecretary of State had brought back will be of "the greatest value" when the time comes for establishing such a peace.

Mr. Roosevelt appeared far from downcast as he discussed with reporters the report which Welles had delivered in secret talks with the President and Secretary of State Hull Thursday and yesterday. As he read a statement he had prepared for the press, the President interjected the comment that "scant immediate prospect" means just that and does not involve possible future developments.

The President's Statement

The statement said:

"Undersecretary of State Welles has concluded the mission upon which he was sent to Europe and has reported to me and to the Secretary of State.

"As I said when the announcement of Mr. Welles' mission was made, Mr. Welles was sent to Europe in order to obtain information with regard to existing conditions. He was never authorized to make, nor has he made, any commitments involving the Government of the United States, nor was he empowered to offer, and he has not offered, any proposals in the name of this Government. He has not received, nor has he brought back to me, any peace proposals from any source.

"The information which he has received from the heads of the governments which he has visited will be of the greatest value to this Government in the general conduct of its foreign relations. As was announced at the time of his departure from the United States, the information communicated to him by the Italian, German, French and British governments will be regarded as entirely confidential by this Government. It relates to the views and policies of the European governments mentioned.

Relations Clarified

"I am glad to say that Mr. Welles' mission has likewise resulted, through personal contacts and through the conversations which he held, in a clarification of the relations between the United States and the countries which he visited and will, I believe, assist in certain instances in the development of better understanding and more friendly relations.

"Finally, even though there may

'With 3 Grains of Salt'

Nazi Story That U. S. Fomented War Is Branded False Here

America Will Fight, 'Polish' Documents Quote Diplomat

By Edwin Shanke
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, March 29.—Official Germany tonight exploded a paper bombshell of 16 documents declared to have been taken from the foreign office archives of conquered Poland, in which Polish envoys to Washington, Paris and London are quoted as attributing these prewar beliefs, actions and policies to two American Ambassadors and, by indirection, to President Roosevelt:

To William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to Paris: The conviction that the United States would "finish" a European conflict on the Allies' side.

To Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to London: A promise to press upon the British leaders "the necessity of helping Poland at once with cash."

To President Roosevelt (apparently the Polish envoy's own opinion, without any quotation from the President): The desire to distract America from domestic problems and, "by conjuring up a war psychosis and conjuring up danger in Europe, he wanted to per-

Hull Repudiates Report; Roosevelt Prescribes Salt

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Immediate and emphatic denial came from American officials last night after Germany's publication of documents, allegedly taken from Polish archives and purporting to show the United States helped to bring on the European war.

In quick succession there were these official reactions to word of the Berlin White Paper:

BULLITT

President Roosevelt, at his press conference, said, with relation to the documents, that one should take with a grain of salt—he later boosted it to three grains of salt — any propaganda put out of Europe at the present time.

Secretary of State Hull, in a formal statement, said the reported conversations were not given "the slightest credence" in his department, and that the alleged statements "have not represented in any way at any time the thought or the policy of the American Govern-

Trade Pacts Pass Test By 3 Votes

Senate Rejects Pittman Proposal For Ratification By Chamber, 44-41

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

By the hair-raising margin of three votes, the Administration bill for three-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act passed its most crucial test in the Senate yesterday.

As Easter holiday crowds looked on in silence, the Senate turned down the Pittman amendment requiring Senate ratification of each new trade agreement. The proposal, which Administration leaders have been fighting with every ounce of strength, was defeated by a vote of 44 to 41.

Democratic ranks were split, as 43 Democrats and Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, registered their disapproval of the amendment, and 18 Democrats voted for it. Also supporting Pittman were the 21 Republicans who voted; Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

Must Still Run Gantlet

Although the bill must still run the gantlet of other weakening amendments, it was generally believed last night that the high-water mark of the opposition was reached on the Pittman proposal.

"We think this was the real test vote," jubilantly observed Chairman Harrison of the Finance Committee, floor manager for the bill. It had been widely reported that if the Pittman amendment had passed, the President would have vetoed the bill.

The Senate had agreed to vote at 4 p. m., and during the last half hour, while the chamber and galleries slowly filled, Senator Norris held the floor to tell his colleagues that the Pittman amendment "would kill the whole thing as dead as a doornail."

Extends Executive Power

As it now stands, the House-approved bill extends to June 12, 1943, the President's power to make trade agreements with foreign countries, provided tariffs are not altered by more than 50 per cent.

Immediately after the Pittman amendment was defeated, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, offered an amendment in effect preserving present excise taxes on cop-

Farley Begins Campaign Tour Today

Expected to Court Southern Votes By Praising Hull; To Visit 12 States

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Postmaster General Farley today will head westward and southward for a score of speeches in a dozen States, including at least one big boost for Secretary of State Hull, rumored to be his possible running mate.

Farley, an avowed candidate in his own right, is expected to express his own high esteem for the Secretary of State in Monday's annual "Mule Day" pageant at Columbia in Hull's native Tennessee.

Talk of a possible Hull-Farley alignment at the Democratic convention meanwhile persisted in the face of the Secretary's complete aloofness from the campaign and Farley's failure to date to make any commitments on other candidates.

Senate Upholds Hull

Farley headed via Indiana and Kentucky into Hull's native territory as the Senate voted the Secretary of State a signal legislative victory by defeating the Pittman amendment for Senate ratification of his reciprocal trade agreements. Despite Hull's refusal to discuss politics with anyone, passage of his trade act extension bill intact would widely be regarded as a vote of confidence in the Secretary.

Mixed with dedications of postoffices, addresses before postmaster groups, and memorial stamp ceremonies on Farley's Southern tour, was expected to be a series of talks with key political figures in the South, and phrases dropped in speeches that may clarify Farley's position as a candidate.

Aid for Vandenberg

Aid from the Senate's liberal Republican bloc meanwhile came to Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, in his fight with New York District Attorney Dewey for pledged delegates in Wisconsin's April 2 Republican primaries.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, who recently espoused Vandenberg's candidacy, was reported en route to Madison, Wis., to stump for primary support of the Michigan Senator.

Vandenberg recently announced his inability to speak either in Wisconsin or Nebraska against Dewey due to pressure of Senate duties, but Dewey is conducting a vigorous last-minute stump of Wisconsin. Nye's eleventh hour visit to the

John Russell Young Named by Roosevelt As Commissioner

JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG,
District Commissioner-designate at his favorite hobby

Veteran Reporter, Washington Native, To Succeed Allen; Civic Groups Pleased

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

John Russell Young, a native of Washington, son of a Congressman, and dean of White House newswriters, was appointed District Commissioner by President Roosevelt yesterday.

He succeeds George E. Allen, whose resignation will go into effect April 15.

Washington citizens, who have been active and earnest in their demands for a "bona fide" resident of the District to succeed Allen, were quick to approve of the new appointee, comments early last night showed.

The President announced to a surprised group of White House reporters at his press conference yesterday that he was sending to the Senate the nomination of their best known member for the commissionership. Young, affectionately known as "Russ" to his newspaper colleagues, has covered the White House for The Evening Star for nearly 20 years.

Born In Washington

Young was born in Washington on April 2, 1882, and has lived here nearly all his life. He is three months younger than the President.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had had a great deal of difficulty over the selection of a successor to Allen, who had left his position as vice president of the Home Insurance Co., of New York, to accept temporarily a second appointment as Commissioner. The President had drafted Allen to try to get through Congress a program for reorganization of the District government.

Jokingly, he told reporters he had tried to select a successor who had been born in the District, who would surround himself with the atmosphere of scholarship, and who at the same time was a skilled politician.

Doctor of Expression

He felt, he said, that he had found just the man to fill these qualifications. The appointee, he declared, was, besides his skill in politics, the first white child born in the District and also head of a great institution of learning.

The President then disclosed the appointee's name.

The institution of learning referred to is the "J. Russell Young School of Expression," which Young facetiously organized many years ago as a result of speeches which he and other White House correspondents made while on Presidential tours. "Diplomas" have been issued to President Roosevelt and a number of other prominent men.

Standing Joke

(The reference to "the first white child born in the District" is a facetious term of long standing at the White House for veteran correspondents who have covered the Executive Mansion.—Editor's note.)

Young's statesmanlike appearance and manner have earned him the title of "Senator" from White House correspondents.

In extolling his skill as a politician, the President had in the mind still another title, namely, "Boss of the White House Correspondents Association." Young is generally credited with dictating the election of the association's officers in recent years.

The President said laughingly he was sure it would be terribly difficult to secure Senate confirmation of Young's appointment. For this reason, he appointed each reporter present a committee of one to work for his confirmation.

In asking him to accept the appointment, he remarked, he told Young that, since he was about his

Communist Official Faces House Action

Dies May Seek Contempt Citation In Refusal to Answer

By Hedley Donovan.

The Dies Committee last night prepared, for the third time this week, to invoke contempt proceedings against a Communist leader for refusal to answer questions related to party membership.

Chairman Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, told reporters the committee "has no alternative when a witness will not answer pertinent questions."

He referred to testimony yesterday by Dr. Albert E. Blumberg, secretary of the Communist Party for Maryland and Washington, who refused to identify records seized in his Baltimore office and insisted he would furnish no information which might incriminate fellow Communists in this area.

Cherry Blossoms May Be Late, But Festival Won't

Dilatory spring probably will delay blossoming of the Tidal Basin cherry trees until April 9 or 10 but will not affect opening of the festival April 6, Curtis Hodges, of the Board of Trade, said yesterday after a conference with Edward Kelly, of the National Capital Parks Office.

Hodges termed reports that his conference with Kelly had resulted in postponing the festival as "ridiculous." "There will be no change that I know of," he added.

Dense fog rolled in after 9 p. m., slowing traffic and forcing cancellation of all air schedules.

4 Die, 35 Hurt As Winds Rip Gulf Village

Other Dead Believed Under Ruins; Church Is Blown Apart

By the Associated Press

Pierre Part, La., March 29.—Tornadic winds accompanied by a driving rain swept through here at 11 a. m. today leaving four known dead, two missing, 35 injured and many others believed still buried in debris of the devastated fishing village.

The dead were Mrs. Nicomede Breaud, 60; Abner Cavalier, 14; Elma Templet, 14 months, and a Mrs. Templet.

The infant was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neuville Templet. She was drowned when blown into the bayou which faces the village. Their son, Lester, 3, is missing, and 5-year-old Alice is badly hurt. Herman Aucoin, 12, also is missing.

30 Homes Demolished

Thirty homes were demolished, as was the large Catholic church, but the wind missed the new village schoolhouse, in which there were more than 300 children.

Dr. Samuel Leblanc, one of the first physicians to reach the scene from surrounding towns, estimated there were 10 dead, 35 hurt and at least 110 persons homeless.

State police, the Red Cross and the State hospital board rushed assistance to the stricken community, which lies far back in the swampland over now almost impassable roads.

The torrential rains continued until long past nightfall, impeding rescue work as gaunt and beareded Cajun fishermen prodded the ruins, seeking additional bodies.

A destructive twister struck tonight at Bogalusa and Amite, both northeast of New Orleans, and left two dead and several injured. Considerable property damage was reported in both towns.

Abraham Wolf, 23, of 1251 I street northeast, made the capture of an unarmed man about a block from the Community Market, 1601 Monticello avenue northeast, yesterday afternoon. A few minutes previously between $40 and $50 was snatched from a cash register in the store by a man holding his hand in his pocket as if he had a gun.

Respect Right Of All Faiths, Hughes Says

Chief Justice Chides Attorney Defending Attack on Catholics

Chief Justice Hughes, in emphatic manner, yesterday interrupted an attorney in the Supreme Court to advise him that religious freedom includes "the right to be left alone and not to be attacked with . . . scurrilous denunciations" of one's chosen faith.

He engaged in a spirited exchange with the attorney, who was defending three members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, who had entered a Catholic home and played a phonograph record assailing the Catholic Church.

The three were convicted under a Connecticut law barring solicitation of funds without permission from the county public welfare council. Hayden Covington, their attorney, contended in the Supreme Court that they had been deprived of their constitutional right to "worship God." He added that the three had worshiped by playing phonograph records in homes to explain the Bible. As he read the record, he brought out that the record played had attacked the Catholic Church as a "racket," a "wicked power" and a "deception."

"Hire a Hall"

Chief Justice Hughes interrupted.

"I suppose these Catholics had some right of religious freedom themselves, did they not?" he asked. "I suppose they have the right to be left alone and not to be attacked with these scurrilous denunciations of their cherished faith.

"What have you to say to that?"

"I say we are right," replied the attorney.

"You can hire a hall," the Chief Justice continued. You can hold a meeting. You can distribute literature. Is it the same thing to go into a Catholic church and deliver these

Revised Bill Provides Teeth For Wage Law

Prison Sentences Provided to Enforce D. C. 48-Hour Act

Scrapping of the present female eight-hour law and substitution of a drastic measure under which employers would face prison for violations, has been proposed by the corporation counsel's office, it was announced yesterday.

The proposal, if enacted, would greatly increase the effectiveness of the District Minimum Wage Board, which at present is powerless in many cases to prosecute violators.

Matt Mahorner, assistant corporation counsel, who drafted the proposal, said the wage board found "it practically impossible to catch violators unless inspectors were kept outside each establishment during the entire working day."

As soon as several minor points are ironed out, the bill will be submitted to the wage board for approval and then to the Commissioners. If they approve, the bill

Maj. Tansey To Be Capital's 'Boss' Today

Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, will be "dictator" at the District Building today.

Also out of town are Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, and Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor. Both Allen and Col. McCoach left the city yesterday before the announcement was made about the successor to Allen.

Old Sol at Switchboard

Sun Spots Turn Telegraph, Radio Into a Tower of Babel

Stricken with a hangover from Easter's seizure of sun spots, short wave radio and telegraph lines yesterday were reduced again to sporadic attacks of gibberish.

Yesterday's tangled communications were nothing, however, to what may be expected about April 20. Then, when the sun has made one of its 27-day revolutions, the agitated face it presented Easter Sunday will bear once more on the earth. Should the sun spots still be present, according to Dr. John A. Fleming, director of the Bureau of Terrestrial Magnetism of the Carnegie Institution, a slightly milder repetition of the Easter disruption of communications will result.

Yesterday's surge of earth currents, which affected short wave radio and all grounded wire circuits, followed what Dr. Fleming described as a "flare" on the sun Thursday. This "great outburst" which was "the dying part of the other" was felt here first yesterday morning.

At that time telegraph circuits changed polarity, literally reversed themselves, and transmitted messages garbled beyond recognition. Then, about sundown, the disturbance was felt again, though in lesser intensity, disturbing transmission over four and five minute periods.

Telegraph wire chiefs said the difficulty manifested itself westward and southward of Washington and quoted reports from New York that it was exceptionally intense north of there.

Radio reception from Europe was disrupted and transatlantic telephone service was silenced but regular broadcasting programs went ahead as usual. The telephone company reported no disturbance on its lines.

Underpass Plan Stricken Out As House Passes Supply Bill

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Authorization for construction of an underpass at Scott Circle was stricken from the 1941 District supply bill on a point of order late yesterday just a few minutes before the House passed the measure otherwise unchanged.

Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, raised the point of order, and Representative Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, chairman of the subcommittee on District appropriations, admitted it was legislation in an appropriations bill without awaiting a ruling of the presiding officer.

Bolles, a member of the House District Committee, explained later that he was opposed to the expenditure of $400,000 for the project when the Commissioners objected to legislation to give local firemen a five-day week because it would cost the District $500,000 a year.

Elimination of the underpass authorization actually reduces the total of the bill by only $15,000, which was the sum appropriated for a study and preparation of plans.

The phrases stricken from the bill would have permitted the Commissioners to proceed with the construction of the underpass at a cost of $400,000, following approval of the Public Roads Administration, by using the Federal-aid highway fund. Half of this is a Federal grant, which is matched by an allocation of the District's gas tax money.

Members of the House subcommittee predicted that the Senate would restore the Scott Circle proj-

Dewey Lays Depression To New Deal

Says Administration Wants Idleness To Continue

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, March 29.—Thomas E. Dewey, campaigning for the Republican Presidential nomination, declared tonight that the New Deal has "a vested interest in continued depression" and does not want recovery.

"It is the first administration in our history which has had a vested interest in continued unemployment," Dewey said in a prepared speech which was broadcast over a Wisconsin network.

Praising Wisconsin as a leader in social progress, he told this State's voters that "the country rightfully looks to you for continued leadership in its fight to win its way out of this New Deal depression."

"New Deal Depression"

(Dewey and Senator Vandenberg of Michigan have entered delegate slates in the Republican column in Wisconsin's Presidential preference primary next Tuesday. President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner are entered in the Democratic column.)

"For it is just that—a New Deal depression," Dewey said.

Asserting that the United States had lagged behind other nations in recovering from the world-wide depression of 1929, he continued:

"The gravity of our situation lies in the fact that the New Deal enjoys more power the longer the depression is continued. . . .

"The first step toward recovery is to take the Government out of the hands of those who do not want recovery. Put it in the hands of those who believe in the future of the country and who want recovery."

The New Yorker declared that the New Deal "has no faith in the future of this country."

"It has no faith in the system of private enterprise that has made this country great," he went on. "It believes that system has broken down. It believes our economy has gone to seed. In place of free enterprise, the New Deal believes in Government domination of business. It relies upon unlimited Government spending in place of private enterprise that makes jobs.

"The hostility of the New Deal toward business has choked the spirit of enterprise. The lifeblood of our economy is in new enterprises—the new business ventures. That is the way we replace businesses that die. That is the way we provide growth for the future."

Growth Stifled, He Says

Dewey said that new factories would have been built, new machinery purchased, stores would have been remodeled and new equipment installed, "but the policies of the present Administration have stifled this development."

Of the Federal budget, he said:

"Balancing the budget is a matter of sound and competent administration. Spending for the sake of spending and spending for the buying of votes can be stopped. The New Deal has inflated the Federal pay roll from 470,000 to nearly 1,000,000 employes. That can be stopped. . . .

"The budget can be balanced . . . without the sacrifice of any essential service and without depriving the needy of Government aid."

Discussing the trade treaty program, Dewey declared that while agricultural exports had increased 16 per cent since 1933, imports which compete with American agriculture had increased 72 per cent.

"That is what I call selling American agriculture down the river," he said.

Banking Head Calls for Stuyd Of SEC Laws

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—Emmett F. Connelly, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, today called for "scientific study" preparatory to a fundamental revision of the laws administered by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

His remarks were made in an unscheduled address before the central States group of the association in conference here.

Connelly said he agreed "entirely" with the statement made by George C. Mathews last Tuesday when he resigned from the commission. Mathews at that time said that the statutes administered by the SEC are sound laws and that they are capable of improvement as conditions warrant, but that if there is to be real improvement their revision should be undertaken as a scientific job.

"That is the best way to accomplish our objectives," Connelly said. "We want a scientific job done by the best brains in the country. It is certainly logical that this work be authorized by Congress at an early date."

Prompt changes should be made in the Federal securities laws, Connelly also said, so that "savings can be put to work creating jobs."

Association Assailed

Cleveland, March 29 (AP).—Otis & Co., Cleveland investment banking firm, asserted in a letter made public tonight that the Investment Bankers Association's reply to the Securities and Exchange Commission's questionnaire on arm's-length bargaining is "a brief in defense of Morgan Stanley & Co.'s stake in the Consumers Power and Dayton Power & Light cases."

Addressed to President E. F. Connely, of the I. B. A., and signed by Otis' president, William R. Daley, the letter says the reply is "far from being an expression in the interest of most of the 700 I. B. A. members.

"If the I. B. A. continues to lend itself to the purposes of those under whose auspices the New York Stock Exchange fell into its present plight, the investment banking industry may find itself likewise led to the slaughter," the communication continued.

"The association, by using its reply to the SEC's civil request for suggestions on a highly technical question as a pretext to lay on the commission's doorstep the blame for the stagnation of the investment market, does not offer any constructive solution of this fundamental problem."

Otis & Co. is a charter member of the I. B. A., and Daley is a former member of the association's board of governors. The Cleveland firm has been identified with steel, rubber and utility industries in the Middle West.

State was seen as a bid to the State's Progressive voters, who may hold the balance of power, and as an offset to the Dewey campaign.

A third leading Republican candidate, Senator Taft, of Ohio, was an onlooker in the Wisconsin primaries, but nonetheless had a stake. A large vote for an uninstructed delegate slate entered in the primaries would be hailed as a surprise vote for Taft. The Ohioan continued to canvass delegates in Southern and border States, and supporters declared he would go to the Republican convention with at least 300 pledged delegates.

Other political developments:

Gov. Olson's "harmony" slate of third term delegates, riddled by withdrawal of former Senator McAdoo, Lieut. Gov. Patterson, and others, was filed yesterday in Los Angeles, Calif. Two other slates were filed, a liberal-left slate by Patterson, who deserted the Olson ticket, and another by the "$30 every Thursday" organization. Vice President Garner's competing slate previously had been filed and an uninstructed Republican slate already has qualified.

Lee Urges Third Term

Declaring for a third term, Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, wired France Paris, Oklahoma Democratic chairman, that State Democrats should choose their own delegates "without the coercion of any political machine." Lee wired that "Franklin D. Roosevelt should be drafted in 1940 and if the rank and file of Oklahoma Democrats are left free to make their own selection, Oklahoma will send its delegation to the national convention pledged to support President Roosevelt."

Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, proposed that Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey be "drafted" as Democratic Senatorial nominee from that State. Smathers said that with Secretary of the Navy Edison running for Governor and Moore for the Senate, "such a ticket will sweep New Jersey to a great Democratic victory." The speculation had been that James H. R. Cromwell, Minister to Canada and husband of Doris Duke, would announce for the New Jersey Democratic Senatorial nomination, with the support of Mayor Hague of Jersey City.

To Visit 12 States

Postmaster General Farley's itinerary, announced yesterday, disclosed he would enter 12 Midwestern, border and Southern States and make at least 20 speeches in the next ten days, beginning with an address before Indiana postmasters in State convention in Indianapolis today.

It will be his first trip South since Farley announced his unconditional candidacy for the Presidency, or since the President denied he had ever told anyone that Farley's religion impaired his Presidential prospects.

After his Indiana stop, Farley will address postmasters in Louisville, Ky., tonight and Monday dedicate a postoffice and participate in the "Mule Day" pageant at Columbia, Tenn. In Nashville the same night he will address Tennessee postmasters.

Busy Itinerary

Farley's busy itinerary includes stops and speeches Tuesday in Belleville, Ill.; St. Louis and Fulton, Mo.; Wednesday in St. Joe, Mo., and Emporia, Kans.; Thursday in Dallas, Tex.; Friday in Longview and Marshall, Tex.; Saturday in Jackson, Miss., and Montgomery, Ala.; next Sunday at Tuskegee Institute, Ala.; April 8 at Jefferson and Athens, Ga.; April 9 at Canton, N. C., and April 10 at Boone and Statesville, N. C.

In Dallas, Farley will address the Texas Cotton Ginners Association. In St. Joe, Mo., Wednesday, the first of the new pony express stamps will be placed on sale on the eightieth anniversary of the first pony mail. He will participate in ceremonies attending sale of the new Booker T. Washington stamps at Tuskegee, April 7, and the Dr. Crawford Long postage stamp sale at Jefferson, Ga., the following day. The rest of his appearances will be largely at postoffice dedications and before postmaster groups, giving an official atmosphere to the tour.

House Asked to Probe Civil Service Board

A resolution asking that the Speaker of the House appoint a committee of five to investigate the U. S. Civil Service Commission was introduced yesterday by Representative Moser (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

When asked the purpose of the inquiry, Moser announced he "couldn't say anything until the debate starts on the resolution."

Tire Blows Out, Breaks Man's Arm

Communist Party Aide May Be Cited

H. Dolsen, Pittsburgh Communist who balked at committee questions, was approved yesterday by the House.

Dies will introduce a resolution Monday, asking for similar action against George Powers, also of Pittsburgh, who appeared before the committee Thursday. The committee has not yet voted to ask a citation of Blumberg, who may be called back for further testimony, but members last night made it plain they consider his case comparable to those of Powers and Dolsen.

Contempt citations are referred from the House to the district attorney here for grand jury action. The penalty for contempt of the House is 1 to 12 months' imprisonment, as well as fine of $100 to $1,000.

Blumberg, who holds degrees from Johns Hopkins, Yale and the University of Vienna, announced shortly after his hearing began:

"I decline to answer any questions designed to identify members of the Communist Party. I decline to answer any questions which can be used to establish a blacklist in industry."

Refuses Score of Times

To more than a score of specific questions Blumberg replied, "I decline to answer, for the reasons previously stated." After each refusal Dies announced, "The chair orders the witness to answer and the witness refuses."

When Dies asked the witness whether he would support the United States in a war against Russia, Blumberg said, "I have enough confidence in the American people to be sure they would not be drawn into such a war."

"Assuming they were . . ." Dies insisted.

"I have enough confidence," Blumberg began.

"Would you or wouldn't you?" Blumberg refused to answer.

Representative Jerry Voohris (Democrat), of California, asked the witness, who taught philosophy at Johns Hopkins for five years, how a man "of your intellectual attainments" could back Soviet policy "when it has shifted so sharply on two occasions since 1933." Blumberg said he could not answer in a few sentences but would be glad to talk Communist theory "by the hour" with the committee in an informal session. The invitation was not accepted.

"Barbara Hutton, P. N."

Blumberg told the committee there are about 500 Communists in Washington and another 500 in Maryland. The Baltimore-Washington district is organized into 40 sections, he asserted.

Blumberg was shown a slip of paper with the notation, "Barbara Hutton, P. N., District Two, Kings, N. Y., to Baltimore." Under questioning by J. B. Matthews, research director for the committee, the witness said that "P. N." can mean party name.

Earlier yesterday the committee questioned Mrs. Blumberg, who was in the Baltimore office when the party records were taken, and Emmett Leonard Murray, 25-year-old messenger at the Government Printing Office.

Mrs. Blumberg said she had joined the Communist Party last fall—her husband has been a member since 1932—but denied any knowledge of the contents of the material confiscated by the committee. She explained her presence in the party office with the statement, "I just work on the surface—typing, you know."

Murray, who gave his address as 3716 Jenifer street northwest, said he came here last year from Denver, where he was a member of the Young Communist League.

Aide Demoted

Murray said he had never been approached by any member of the league here and no longer considered himself a member.

Matthews placed on the record what he said was a vote of censure adopted by the Baltimore branch, condemning Joan Davis, and demoting her from her post as branch secretary until such time as she should learn the "incorrectness of a friendly attitude" toward Trotskyites.

Richard H. Lawry, of West Homestead, Pa., appeared before the committee, accompanied by Representative Matthew Dunn (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, to state that he is not and never has been a member of the Communist Party.

The witness said he was removed from his position as a census supervisor in Allegheny County, Pa., after his name was mentioned before the Dies Committee in the course of testimony on Pittsburgh Communists.

per, oil, coal and lumber. This proposal, which was very nearly carried in the House, will be voted on early next week.

Only a handful of Senators were in their seats during the early part of the afternoon, but there was a scarcely concealed atmosphere of excitement about the Senate wing of the Capitol. The outcome depended on a few doubtful votes; and frantic efforts were made to see that not a vote was lost.

During the morning, Administration forces were dismayed to learn that one of their supporters, Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, had been grounded at Pittsburgh on his flight to Washington from Kansas City. Efforts were made to arrange for an Army plane to transport him to the Capital; but the weather cleared and the commercial plane on which Truman was a passenger reached Washington in the nick of time.

Schwartz Follows "Conscience"

Senator Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming, whose views had been in doubt to the last minute, revealed shortly before the vote that he was opposed to the Pittman amendment. Referring to the widespread support for the Pittman proposal in the West, Schwartz absorved to reporters that "there comes a time when a man has to choose between his own political fortunes and his conscience."

U. S. Cites 102 In Plumbing Trust Drive

Companies, Unions, Individuals Face Conspiracy Charges

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, March 29.—Declaring an "uneconomical marketing system" permeates the plumbing industry from manufacturer to plumber, the Government brought an indictment today against 102 companies, associations and individuals charging they had violated the antitrust laws.

Among those named on the criminal charges were: The National Association of Master Plumbers of the United States, Crane Co., Kohler Co., Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., Chase Brass & Copper Co., Eagle-Picher Sales Co., American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation; Grinnel Co., Inc., James B. Clow & Sons; Fiat Metal Manufacturing Co., Never-Split Seat Co., Sloan Valve Co., W. A. Case & Son Manufacturing Co., Behrer Nason Co., Galloup Pipe & Supply Co., Hajoca Corporation, the Hardware & Supply Co., of Akron, Ohio; Horne-Wilson, Inc., Inland Supply Co., Nelson Co., Noland Co., Inc., Murray W. Sales & Co., Braman, Dow & Co. and Chicago Faucet Co.

Among the individuals named was Walter J. Kohler, head of the Kohler Co., and former Governor of Wisconsin.

The indictments were the latest in a series brought against a score of industries allied with building in the Government's antitrust drive.

A Department of Justice statement said:

"This case represents a new phase of the department's efforts to reduce building costs through elimination of illegal and costly restraints. Indictments returned previously have attacked restraints existing as a result of combinations among local contractors and labor groups. The instant case is directed to the elimination of restraints in an entire industry by a single action Nation-wide in scope.

"Its purpose is to eliminate unnecessary and costly steps in the distribution of plumbing supplies. If successful, it is estimated that costs to consumers of plumbing supplies will be reduced from 20 per cent to 25 per cent."

Among the organizations indicted were three trade associations and six jobber associations. These included the New York State Association of Wholesalers of Plumbing and Heating Supplies, Schenectady; Jobbers Credit Association, Inc., New York; Central Supply Association, Chicago; Plumbing and Heating Wholesalers of New England, Inc., Boston; Southern Wholesalers Association, Atlanta; Wholesale Distributors' Association of Texas, Dallas; American Institute of Wholesale Plumbing and Heating Supply Associations, Somerville, Mass.; Manufacturers Clearing House of Illinois, Inc., Chicago.

Nine Unions Face Charges

The indictment named seven master plumber associations and nine local unions. The union groups indicted are located in Cleveland, Canton, Ohio., Detroit, Racine, Wis., South Bend, Ind., Miami, Fla., and Washington, D. C.

Fifty-two individuals besides Kohler were named. The indictment also named as co-conspirators 52 manufacturers, 14 jobbers, 8 jobbers' associations, 29 master plumbers' associations, 6 local unions and 7 individuals.

Those indicted are subject, on conviction, to a maximum fine of $5,000 each, or imprisonment for one year, or both.

Firm Denies Conspiracy

Kohler, Wis., March 29 (AP).—The Kohler Co., plumbing equipment firm which was indicted with others at Cleveland today on charges of violating the Sherman anti-trust act, issued a statement tonight denying that it ever had participated in any conspiracy.

The statement said:

"The policies of the Kohler Co. are and always have been independently determined, and it has never had any part in or connection with a conspiracy of any sort. The present Kohler Co. marketing policy has been in effect for half a century."

Trust Threats Held Greater Than Chains

Ex-Gov. Christianson Favors Substitute For Patman Bill

By the Associated Press

Theodore Christianson, manager of the National Association of Retail Druggists and former Governor of Minnesota, told a House Ways and Means subcommittee yesterday the threat of monopoly was a greater danger than the present size of chain-store organizations.

Questioned by Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, at a hearing on the Patman interstate chain-store tax bill, Christianson said that because it was the potential monopoly he feared, he would approve legislation "freezing" the existing retail system as a substitute for the Patman bill.

He insisted, however, that the danger of what Knutson termed "an economic cyclone" which might follow enactment of the tax measure was largely eliminated by amendments which Patman has suggested.

Patman would cut the proposed tax in half, makng its range from $25 a store for each unit in excess of 15 to $500 for each one over 500, instead of $50 to $1,000, and would defer for seven years the effectiveness of a section of the bill multiplying the tax by the number of States in which the chain operated.

The Texan told the committee his bill would bring from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 in revenue annually and would "greatly stimulate recovery." The measure also would enable "local people to go into business, make money and pay income tax on it," he said.

Christianson said existing anti-trust legislation could not solve the chain-store problem, because it was aimed at production, whereas the great retail chains were concerned primarily with distribution.

Concentration in distribution was more dangerous than concentration in manufacturing, he said, because it could lead easily to monopoly in both.

Retail food chains, he said, first eliminating independent wholesalers in their business, turned next to manufacturing their own products, and profits on these were so great that they were able to sell other brands at less than cost, demoralizing the price and profit structure of competing retailers.

"The technique of monopoly," he said, "has always been to gain control of a market by cutting prices, and then to use that control to raise them."

Roosevelt May Ask Free Hand On WPA Cash

Lifting of Restrictions Might Bring Need For Added Funds

President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that he was considering asking Congress to give him a free hand in the expenditure of work relief funds in the fiscal years beginning July 1.

This would mean that the restriction, applicable during the present fiscal year, whereby funds originally voted for the Works Projects Administration would have to be spread over the entire fiscal year would not apply.

The effect, it is generally believed, would be that total expenditures by the WPA during the coming fiscal year would exceed the $1,000,000,000 estimated in the President's January budget message to Congress. In other words, Congress could vote $1,000,000,000 with the understanding that it would be spent on the basis of what the WPA conceived to be the needs of the unemployed.

Thus, the appropriation, which otherwise would have to be spread over the entire year, might be exhausted before the year was out, necessitating a supplementary appropriation of an undetermined amount at the next session.

Such a development would throw further out of gear the President's January budget estimates, and would give new emphasis to the question of what is to be done about the $45,000,000,000 debt limit. Under the January budget the public debt would be slightly under the limit at the end of the next fiscal year provided Congress raised $460,000,000 in new taxes—a request which has met with no response in Congress.

Asked about the WPA problem at his press conference, the President said consideration was being given to a request that the new appropriation be free of the spread-over-a-year requirement, which was first introduced in 1938 at the instigation of Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia.

Reorganization Row Impends In Forest Shift

President Reported Weighing Transfer Of 40 Million Acres

Reports that the President is considering transfer of large United States Forest Service acreage from the Agriculture to the Interior Department last night raised the possibility of another reorganization bill controversy.

President Roosevelt at his press conference declined to deny or confirm the reports, saying details of his new reorganization plans have not yet been worked out.

He said his new interdepartmental and intradepartmental merger recommendations will probably be ready for Congress in a week or ten days, but until then he said he could divulge no details.

Order Said to Need Approval

Reports several weeks ago that the entire Forest Service would be transferred to the Interior Department raised a storm of opposition from farm and wild life organizations and in Congress and the plan was reputedly dropped. Members of Congress who sided with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in his tug of war with Secretary of Interior Ickes over the agency, said the President in effect had promised not to transfer the agency when the original reorganization bill was passed.

A modified order now said to be waiting the approval or disapproval of the President is understood to provide for transfer of about 40,000,000 acres of the total 176,000,000 forest-land acreage from the Agriculture Department to Interior Department.

Opposition Forming

The transferred areas, it was said, would include recreational areas and activities in the forest land, high scenic areas, grazing land and possibly wild-life work, but would leave most of the forest land under the Agriculture Department.

Other reorganization shifts said to be under study would include transfer of certain food and drug administration functions to the new Federal Security Agency, and a possible shift of the Rural Electrification Administration from the Agriculture to the Interior Department.

Ickes Urges Support

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—Creation of a Federal agency of conservation and transfer of the Forest Service from the Agriculture to the Interior Department was advocated today by Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

He told the eighteenth convention of the Izaak Walton League of America that the conservation department "would free conservation agencies from domination of hostile interests," he said.

He said the service should be transferred so it could be associated with other major conservation activities.

In Washington, Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska, said it "would be a mistake for the President to transfer any of the forestry service to Interior and an awful mistake to transfer Rea."

Cold 'Much Better,' Roosevelt Declares

President Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that his cold was much better, but that he still had no plans for his annual spring trip to Warm Springs, Ga.

There are a lot of things coming up right now, he said, and he is on a 24-hour basis.

Hughes Deplores Slurs on Faith

attacks on the Catholic faith? Is it the same thing to go into a person's home and deliver these attacks?

"It there no limit at all on what you can do because you think you are worshipping God?"

"There is no limit, so far as this record is concerned," the attorney responded.

Covington argued that if the record constituted an offense against the peace, Republicans and Democrats would be forbidden to talk against each other, to which Justice Hughes countered:

"Do you not recognize that different circumstances should be recognized in practising freedom of religion?"

The three who were convicted were Newton Cantwell and his two sons, Jesse, 16, and Russell, 18. Jesse was convicted of a breach of the peace.

Attorney General Francis A. Pallotti, of Connecticut, and Edwin S. Pickett, prosecuting attorney of the Court of Common Pleas at New Haven, upheld the convictions.

Justice McReynolds took issue with Pallotti regarding the statute in dispute. When Pickett declared one "shouldn't stir up discontent and strife in a locality entitled to peace" and that it was only natural for the Catholics to "rise up in arms against the record," the Justice observed:

"Jesus Christ stirred up a good deal of trouble in Jerusalem that was unpopular."

Pickett replied that "as I remember my Bible, there was something done about that."

Justice Murphy, the only Catholic on the bench, listened quietly to most of the discussion, but at one point asked if the principal purpose of going from house to house was not the "dissemination of ideas" instead of the solicitation of funds.

"Yes," Covington said.

"But the conviction was for soliciting funds," Justice Reed remarked.

"Is the receipt of money part of the religious worship?" Justice Stone asked.

"It doesn't say so in the record," Covington responded.

LaGuardia Says He May Ignore FCC

Threatens to Carry Fight for New York's Station to Congress

Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York yesterday threatened in a hearing here to "see Congress" if the Federal Communications Commission refuses to extend the operating hours of WCNY, New York's municipally owned radio broadcasting station.

The colorful mayor spoke caustically of some programs on the commercial stations.

Testifying at an FCC hearing, the mayor surprised a packed room when he asked dramatically:

"What will happen if we go on the air anyway—without your permission?"

No Answer

Trial Examiner R. H. Hyde appeared taken aback and offered no reply.

Station WCNY now has a temporary license for operation from 6 a. m. to sundown. Mayor LaGuardia, who testified that as mayor he directed this noncommercial station in the interest of New York citizens, asked for an extension of the operating time to 11 p. m.

Opposing him at the hearing were attorneys for Station WCCO, of Minneapolis, a Columbia Broadcasting System outlet which is on the same operating frequency.

"A publicly owned station, operating in the public interest, should take precedence over a private commercial station," LaGuardia shouted, coincident with an attack on the big broadcasting companies for their "arrogance."

"They need a good dressing down," he said of the major networks. "The quicker, the better for the American people."

Speech Stricken Out

Previously LaGuardia insisted on making a speech, which was stricken from the record at the instance of the opposing attorneys, eulogizing the public service rendered by his station in disseminating everything from market produce information to the housewife to broadcasting spiritually elevating and educational programs.

"Some of their programs are darn good, but some are terrible. In fact, they're lousy," he said of commercial programs. "Our programs are not connected with soap, toilet water or breakfast foods. We don't get a dime for our time."

LaGuardia came to the hearing armed with two copies of the Congressional Record, from which he read liberally.

"Like all former Congressmen," he cracked, "you'll notice I'm only quoting my own remarks."

"I never thought any of this stuff would ever become useful," he later interjected as he read excerpts from his House remarks in 1926 dealing with governmental powers over radio.

In cross-examination, LaGuardia chided the Columbia-owned station for opposing him.

Calls Opposition Bad Taste

"You shouldn't be here in the first place," he replied to a pointed question from Attorney Duke Patnich. "It certainly is very bad taste for Columbia to come here to oppose the City of New York."

He described the whole procedure as contrary to the spirit and intent of the law.

"If the law doesn't suit you, then you claim you're going to take other action?" he was asked by Patnich.

"You bet I am," the mayor replied. "I'm going to take it before Congress. It's the right of every American citizen."

The hearing was adjourned to April 10, when engineers will argue the technical aspects of the New York station's request.

Policy of Appeasement Fails With Head-Hunters

Lure of Food, Trinkets Outweighed By Misgivings Toward Christians; Philippine Constabulary Miffed

By R. P. Cronin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Pantabagan, P. I., March 29.—Swarthy headhunters extended a cordial hand to provincial and constabulary officials today, then scuttled the peace conference to which they had been coaxed from primitive haunts deep in the wilds by promises of food and gifts.

Suspicion of their Christian brothers, it was believed, proved stronger than the lure of food and trinkets, about which appeasement efforts centered.

Some dozen warriors in G-string attire and long black hair emerged from their hideouts in answer to the call for a general tribal powwow on headhunting. Gov. Aurelio Cecilio, of Neuva Ecija province, alarmed by the increase in beheadings, had sent friendly tribal runners into the wilds of the Cordellera Mountains with word of the meeting and promises of food and presents.

Constabulary Miffed

While only a handful of the Pagan tribesmen appeared, there were indications many more had come down from the hills and were stalking the fringe of this provincial village to learn what it was all about. There was disappointment over the meager representation, as invitations had been willingly accepted, constabulary officials said.

Unarmed, the tribesmen cordially greeted the Governor and other officials. Then they were gone. No chance was given officials to tell them that they must live in peace with other Filipinos, Christian or non-Christian, as had been planned.

Some Blame Christians

Officials and Christian tribesmen here for the conference could not agree as to what had caused the increase in headhunting. Some said it was the old tribal custom, the demand by brides for Christian heads as wedding gifts. Others said Christian encroachment on the fishing and hunting lands of the pagans was to blame.

Among the latter was Sam Brown, a giant American Negro who is carrying the Gospel to savage haunts. With the Bible as his only weapon, Sam is teaching the killers they must not kill. He decried the theory that brides demanded Christian heads. He had talked with many non-Christian brides, he said, who told him they did not seek heads as gifts because they knew the men they loved would be executed or imprisoned if they killed.

Report Backs Marvin Stand In Gibbon Case

Fleming to Make Report to Trustees On G. W. U. Severance

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, is supported in his stand in the Martha Gibbon case in a statement made yesterday by Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the university's board of trustees.

Head eof a special committe named by the board to investigate criticism of the administration by Miss Gibbon, assistant professor of English, Fleming said:

"The committee finds that there is no basis nor foundation for the statements made by Miss Gibbon as to unfair treatment, and in view of all these circumstances and Miss Gibbon's voluntary resignation, the action taken by the board of trustees in confirming the acceptance of her resignation was proper."

Resigned March 6

Fleming, who is president of the Riggs National Bank, said his investigating committee is submitting to the trustees a report embracing the following points:

1. Under date of March 6, Miss Gibbon voluntarily submitted her resignation.

2. "If at any time prior to said resignation Miss Gibbon felt that she had a grievance, she did not see fit to avail herself of the right of appeal as provided in the Ordinances and Code Governing the Academic Personnel . . . nor did she make any attempt to call the attention of the board of trustees to what she terms in her letter of March 19 'intolerable injustice.'"

3. Miss Gibbon was secure in her position as assistant professor until 1944 at least, and she was advised of this fact.

4. "The committee finds that Miss Gibbon was advised that she would be recommended for sabbatical leave for the academic year 1940-41. Under the rulings of the university it is expected that sabbatical leave will be used for professional advancement.

Suggestions refused

"At the request of Prof. Stone, the president and deans agreed that if at the end of this furlough Miss Martha Gibbon desired to accept an appointment elsewhere a recommendation would be made to the board that the requirement of subsequent service be waived in her case. The committee is advised that Miss Gibbon declined to consider either suggestion."

5. "A careful review of the annual reports and statements submitted definitely establishes the fact that Miss Gibbon has never been recommended for promotion to associate professorship by the deans of her college."

6. That, "contrary to statements made by Miss Gibbon," procedure with respect to faculty personnel "gives due regard to the recommendations of the executive officers and deans concerned" and "no deviation from the normal procedure has occurred with respect to Miss Gibbon during her term of service to the university."

Mrs. Frank Goldberg, president of the intermediate group of the local auxiliary, and Miss Tillie Norwood, president of the junior group, also will go.

Mrs. Joseph Millenson will attend as national secretary of the auxiliaries.

"Nine patients from Washington are at the Denver Sanatorium, and another one is going Saturday," Mrs. Wallack said. The sanatorium is a non-sectarian institution for patients who cannot pay and is maintained by voluntary contributions.

Patent Office Party to Try Out Snakebite Cure

A patented and improved snakebite cure will be served to 1,200 persons to help them toast the 150th anniversary of the Patent Office, at a dinner in the Mayflower Hotel April 10.

The patent is cited on the label, No. 379,183, issued as a snakebite remedy in 1888, but the modern improvements will become important for the diners.

They will mean a drink compounded of old whisky and a new kind of port wine—instead of a mixture of straight alcohol, gall of the earth, rattlesnake weed, alum and tincture of iodine, which went into the original snakebite remedy.

Date for the banquet is enventors' and Patent Day, proclaimed by the President. Guests will include members of Congress, the Cabinet and leading inventors of the United States and other countries.

McNutt Tells Hopes, Doubts On Hatch Act

He Advises Diners Not to Judge Law Before It's Tested

Paul V. McNutt told the Society of Personnel Administration last night that he viewed the Hatch Act as an experiment with great possibilities both of improving the public service and of endangering efficiency.

McNutt answered a barage of questions after finishing his formal address at the society's dinner at 1423 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Commenting on the Hatch Act, which forbids political activity of Government workers, McNutt said he favored anything that would help build up a career service in the Government.

However, McNutt said, he felt that there were grave dangers in connection with policing Government service. Fundamentally, he said, he was inclined to feel that Government workers as well as other citizens had a Constitutional right to participate in political processes.

McNutt concluded that in any event it would be unfair and ill advised to judge the effect of the act without waiting for a thorough test.

Applause greeted McNutt's declaration that the right of Government workers to organize for collective bargaining did not include the right to strike.

Poll Tax Freezes Congress Control, Council Is Told

The poll tax in eight States has a direct effect on congressional committees, according to a report presented by Mrs. Fred G. Krivonos, of Washington, before the National Legislative Council in session here yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

Because of the small percentage of the population of voting age permitted to vote under the poll tax system, representatives are returned again and again to Congress, gaining seniority here that gives them places on important committees. Thus the eight States control a third of the committees whereas they would normally control only a sixth, were there an even division among the 48 States, Mrs. Krivonos said.

The first hearing ever held in Congress on the poll tax was that March 6 before a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee. Others have been set for April 2, 3, 9 and 10.

Coed Slaying Suspect Kept Safe From Mob

Police Cordon Guards Quizzing of Salesman At Pa. Prison Farm

By James Shepley
United Press Staff Writer

State College, Pa., March 29.—A 35-year-old oil burner salesman was being questioned by State police tonight about the murder and mutilation of Rachael Taylor, Pennsylvania State College freshman.

Troopers arrived early tonight at the Pleasant Gap headquarters with the suspect, who was arrested early today in Philadelphia. They took him inside the substation 9 miles from here and locked the doors and drew the blinds.

Mob Wrath Feared

The man, who has lived in State College for several years, limped when he left the car, and his right arm was bandaged. Authorities said that he was taken to Pleasant Gap for questioning, rather than brought here, because of the mass indignation over the savage killing of the 17-year-old coed from Wildwood, N. J.

Later tonight the prisoner was taken to another State police substation in a section of Rockview Prison Farm. His inquisitors were seeking to escape the crowd that flocked to windows and doors of the Pleasant Gap station.

Newspapermen who followed to Rockview were kept at a distance from that station by a cordon of 30 State police.

A "tip" furnished by James Lowrey, Negro porter in a Philadelphia hotel saloon, resulted in the suspect's arrest. When Lowrey noticed the man had what appeared to be bloodstains on his clothing and he noticed the man's name and a State College address in a notebook, the porter decided to notify officers.

Wakened by Police

The man had asked Lowrey directions to the Penn Athletic Club and the location of an eating place. He had asked Lowrey to awaken him this morning, but police took him in custody instead.

Friends of the suspect described him as quiet and unobtrusive, dark and handsome. His landlady said he left here for Philadelphia about 6 p. m. yesterday for some furnace equipment. He makes such trips occasionally, she said. She said he still was at her home when she retired at 11 p. m. Wednesday.

Legion Backs $86,000 Drive Of Boys Club

Campaign for Funds To Be Opened Today By 588 Workers

Indorsement of the drive by the Police Boys' Club for its 1940 budget of $86,000 was announced yesterday by the District Department of the American Legion.

The Boys' Club, now beginning its seventh year of work, carries on recreational and welfare activities among 14,000 underprivileged boys here. The campaign for funds will be opened by 588 workers today.

William T. Slattery, District Legion commander, praised the club as in harmony with the child welfare and Americanization work of his organization.

"Not only has department headquarters indorsed the current campaign," Slattery said, "but the individual posts will take appropriate action, backed up by going among their fellows and raising funds so that the good work already established may continue."

Morris Cafritz, president of the Boys' Club, said the legion's resolution of approval was the first to reach the campaign headquarters and that the Legion presented the first radio broadcast in behalf of the club early this week.

"Clubs, societies, organizations and churches throughout Washington are giving similar support," Cafritz said.

The first campaign report will be given Tuesday, at a luncheon at the Cosmos Club, Madison place and H street northwest.

Rep. Treadway Calls For Tax Commission

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee, yesterday urged Congress to create a nonpartisan commission composed of members of Congress and representatives of the public to study the Federal tax structure.

"It is high time we took our Federal tax system apart and rebuilt it along more satisfactory lines," Treadway told the House. "We should endeavor to develop a long-range, well-balanced, equitable and simplified scheme of taxation which will meet the legitimate revenue needs of the Government without unduly burdening the citizen or business enterprise."

Hull Denies U. S. Promised Aid to Allies

Bullitt and Potocki Join in Repudiating Report From Nazis

William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, who was reported in the documents to have told the Polish Ambassador to this country that the United States undoubtedly "would participate in later stages of the war, declared "I have never made to anyone the statements attributed to me."

And Polish Ambassador Jerzy Potocki followed with the assertion that "I never had any conversations with Ambassador Bullitt on America's participation in war."

Mr. Roosevelt, appearing not at all concerned over the dispatches from Berlin announcing the White Paper, made his characterization of them without having read the details, but, he said, with knowledge of their purport.

Hull Queries Aides

He said he had no appointment with Bullitt and his only anticipation of a visit with the Ambassador was when the latter would call briefly before departing for his Paris post next week. Later Bullitt did call on him, but it was said to have been on a routine matter.

Immediately after the news cables from Berlin arrived here, Secretary Hull called into conference his chief associates in the department, seeking word whether any of them knew of any possible factual basis for the Berlin reports. He then prepared his statement, which he read to Ambassador Bullitt, now here, over the telephone. The Ambassador concurred in it and it was made public. It said:

The press, this evening, carries the report of the issuance by the German foreign office of a White Book containing documents alleged to have been found in the archives of the Polish foreign office in Warsaw and purporting to contain accounts of conversations held by policy officials with diplomatic officials of the United States.

I may say, most emphatically, that neither I nor any of my associates in the Department of State have ever heard of such conversations as those alleged, nor do we give them the slightest credence. The statements alleged have not represented in any way at any time the thought or the policy of the American Government.

Bullitt's statement came a short time later. He said briefly:

"The President has already indicated that propaganda of this nature should be taken with several grains of salt.

"This particular piece of propaganda should be taken with even more salt.

"I have never made to anyone the statements attributed to me."

Potocki's Comment

Count Potocki's comment was:

"The publication by the German government of pretended documents from the Polish foreign office is obviously for propaganda purposes. I deny the allegations attributed to my reports.

"I never had any conversations with Ambassador Bullitt on America's participation in war."

In London, United States Ambassador Kennedy, also named in the documents published at Berlin, maintained silence for the time being.

On Capitol Hill there was quick and indignant comment, and indications that the incident might have political repercussions.

"Falsehood," Says Pittman

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, voiced this feeling when he declared the reports constituted a "falsehood" and were designed by Germany to "stir up opposition to the President and create fear in the minds of the people."

He said "Congress alone can declare war," and will not be influenced by statements by diplomats.

Comment included:

Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut: "The source from which documents emanate nowadays certainly is open to suspicion. We don't even know the objectives of our former Allies, much less those of the axis powers. We should behoove ourselves to sit back and hope that the European powers negotiate their own peace without our participation."

Senator Pepper Democrat), of Florida: "It's German propaganda, and it shouldn't affect our policies in the least."

"Natural," Thomas Says

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina: "The question involved is whether the documents are true, and I suppose someone will ask Mr. Bullitt about that."

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he thought it was "only natural" for American envoys to express sympathy with the aims of the countries to which they were assigned.

"If any American envoy spoke against the country to which he was assigned, that might be unusual," he said.

There was some lifting of eyebrows here at a statement in the documents to the effect that Ambassador Bullitt, "acting under the rights he enjoyed," had "ordered" Ambassador Kennedy to present certain views to Prime Minister Chamberlain at London. There was no serious comment here, however, on the assertion.

Kennedy Sees Halifax

London (Saturday), March 30 (AP). United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy declined today to comment on the documentation of alleged Polish diplomatic reports released by the German foreign office.

Kennedy had a long talk yesterday with Lord Halifax, the British foreign secretary. The subject was not disclosed.

Most of the national press carries accounts of the Berlin documents on inside pages this morning, along with President Roosevelt's comment that European propaganda should be taken with three grains of salt. A typical caption over the story was: "Nazis Now Say U. S. A. Caused War."

Allies Warned On Near East By Molotoff

'Playing With Fire,' He Says; Disclaims Plan To Seize Bessarabia

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, March 29.—Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff proclaimed tonight Russia's desire to "maintain our neutrality and refrain from any participation in the war" in Europe, but flatly warned the Western Allies that they are "playing with fire" with their armies in the Near East.

He declared Russia does not intend to wrest her lost province of Bessarabia from Rumania "by war."

Thrusts at U. S.

In a speech highly critical of Britain and France and with some thrusts at the United States, Molotoff told the Supreme Soviet, Russia's legislature, that the Soviet Union "will continue our policy, whether anybody likes or dislikes it."

High points of his review of foreign policy and international developments included:

THE UNITED STATES—Russian-United States relations "have not improved of late," but they "have not become worse unless we take into consideration the so-called moral embargo against the Soviet Union, which, now that peace with Finland has been concluded, is devoid of any significance."

GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE—"They do not like our policies. They want us to fight Germany in order to further their imperialistic aims. The U. S. S. R. will never be a tool of any country."

GERMANY—"Soviet - German relations were firmly proved in the Polish campaign."

THE NEAR EAST—"In Syria and the Near East there is a suspicion of activities of the eastern army of the Western powers . . . We must be vigilant against any attempts to use these troops for a purpose hostile to the Soviet Union. The danger of playing with fire should be apparent to them. Our relations with Turkey and Iran are regulated by nonaggression pacts."

(Britain and France have assembled a huge force in the Near East, according to some estimates as high as 500,000 men under command of French Gen. Maxime Weygand.)

RUMANIA—"We have not recognized the seizure of Bessarabia by Rumania but we have never demanded its return. The Soviet Union, however, does not mean to regain this by war and there has been no worsening in our relations with Rumania."

JAPAN—"Japan must realize that the Soviet Union will not tolerate any violation of her interests. Only if this is understood can our relations with Japan develop satisfactorily."

Turning to the war with Finland, Molotoff said the conflict "was not simply a clash with Finnish troops."

"The matter was more complicated. We were fighting not merely Finnish troops, but the combined forces of the imperialists of a number of countries, including Britain and France.

"Military aid did not come only from the Allies, but also from certain other imperialist countries, including Italy and even the United States.

Gives Losses

"The Finnish war indeed was a welcome opportunity for a number of imperialist states to embark on war aginst the Soviet Union. Despite all these efforts the strength and determination of the Red army converted the war into a glorious victory."

Molotoff placed Russian losses in the Finnish war at 48,745 killed and 158,863 wounded, and Finland's at not less than 60,000 killed and 250,000 wounded.

(Finnish Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustave Mannerheim had estimated the Finnish dead at 15,000 and Russian dead at 200,000. Scandinavian observers figured Russian casualties at 250,000 dead and 250,000 wounded, and estimated Finnish casualties at 30,000 dead and 35,000 wounded.)

Nazis Publish 'White Book' Accusing U. S. of Fomenting the War

suade the American people to accept America's enormous preparedness program, a program which goes beyond defense needs."

Official German spokesman, in handing out the documentation at the foreign office, limited their comment to saying the documents "throw an interesting light on the part which American policy played in bringing about the present war."

Press Assails U. S. Envoys

The Nazi press, however, accused Bullitt and Kennedy of "using all their influence to aggravate the atmosphere of hostility in Europe" before the war broke out.

All but one of the documents are in typewritten Polish. Photographic copies of the alleged originals were furnished to the press. The sixteenth document purported to be a 1935 memorandum of Anthony Eden, the British statesman, on a conversation with Marshal Pilsudski, of Poland.

The documents, in the main, covered the period leading up to the March 31, 1939, Allied pledge of aid to Poland in case she were attacked, and extended some months thereafter. Mostly they constituted secret reports from the Polish diplomatic envoys to the then Polish foreign secretary, Col. Joseph Beck.

There was immediate conjecture in Berlin diplomatic circles as to whether the substance of this third German "White Book" had been revealed to Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's fact-finder, when he was here.

Western Powers Held Guilty

There also was speculation as to whether the documents were released as an implied answer to Mr. Roosevelt's speech of March 16, when he said the world must seek a "moral basis" for peace.

At any rate, the National Zeitung, which is close to Field Marshal Hermann Goering, said tonight: "Germany now is laying on the table proof of the war guilt of the western powers, as well as their open and secret stooges."

The newspaper described the "White Book" (the third of the war from Germany) as a world sensation, because "all those men of prominence and official position who belong to the enemy camp and who can claim for themselves to have involved the world in this war, through carefully prepared acts, figure in it.

"Especially noteworthy in this connection is the fateful role which American diplomats, especially those stationed in the most important posts in Europe, assumed. There can be no doubt after taking cognizance of these Polish documents that these American representatives used all their influence, the strength of which they knew ponderously how to underscore, to aggravate the atmosphere in Europe."

Opposed to Appeasement

The documentation attributes to American diplomacy and especially to Bullitt, opposition to any appeasement of the totalitarian states by Great Britain, through compromise.

One bright note in the 48 pages of ambassadorial reports is a quotation attributed to Kennedy in which he describes Mr. Roosevelt's confidence in Kennedy's oldest son, Joseph, jr.

"You can't imagine to what extent my oldest boy, who recently was in Poland, has the ear of the President," the Polish Commercial Attache in London allegedly quoted Kennedy as saying. "I would say the President believes him more than he does me—possibly because Joe presents his case with such conviction and enthusiasm."

After giving out the documents, German officials said there would be more—later. "This is just the first of a series which will speak for itself," they said.

Excerpts from the documents, as handed out:

Paper labeled confidential report by Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador in Washington, dated November 1, 1938:

"Bullitt's reports to President Roosevelt and the State Department are always studied with attention.

"Bullitt spoke with the greatest vehemence and strong hatred of Germany and Chancellor Hitler. He opined that only strength applied at the close of a war could in the future put an end to Germany's mad expansion. To my question how he viewed the coming war, he replied that the United States, France and Britain must arm up tremendously in order to defy German power."

"Potocki" Cables to "Beck"

Document labeled cable from Potocki to Polish Foreign Minister Josef Beck declaring Bullitt was returning to Europe charged with assuring France and England that:

"1. American foreign policy will become active under the leadership of President Roosevelt, who condemns totalitarian states sharply and unequivocally.

"2. War preparations by the United States on sea, on land and in the air will be carried out with increasing speed and will devour the colossal sum of $1,250,000,000.

"3. The President holds the determined view that France and England must put an end to every policy of compromise with the totalitarian states. They (France and England) are not to enter upon any discussions with them that have the purpose of bringing about any changes in territory.

4. Moral assurance is given that the United States will abandon its isolation policy and is ready in the event of war to participate actively on the side of England and France. America is ready to place its entire resources in the way of finances and raw materials at their disposal.

"Bullitt was very emphatic in saying that France must not enter into any sort of an agreement with Mussolini. . . . He (Bullitt) characterized Mussolini's methods as common gangsterism and blackmail."

"We Shall Finish It"

Alleged "strictly secret" communication to Beck from Jules Lukasiewicz, dated "February, 1939," after Bullitt returned to Paris.

"Should a war break out (Lukasiewicz said Bullitt told him we certainly will not participate at the beginning, but we shall finish it.

"He (Bullitt) gave expression to his conviction that the President surely had said he would sell airplanes to France, as the French army constituted the first line of defense for the United States. . . ."

Another "strictly secret" message from Lukasiewicz dated March 29, 1939, recounting an alleged talk between the Pole and Bullitt:

"I told Bullitt no state in central or eastern Europe could take a single English proposal seriously unless England engaged in actions which proved absolutely and beyond a peradventure of doubt its determination to sever relations with Germany.

"Ambassador Bullitt took my observations very much to heart and requested me to restate them. I noted that he tried to memorize every paragraph . . . the following day, March 25, Ambassador Bullitt informed me he had adopted my views, and, acting under the rights he enjoyed, had ordered the United States Ambassador in London, Joseph O. Kennedy, to go to Prime Minister Chamberlain's residence today and repeat all this to him, at the same time categorically emphasizing the responsibility of the English government."

Tells of Talk With Kennedy

Report ascribed to the Polish Ambassador in London, Count Edouard Raczinski, dated March 29, 1939, on British attitude toward Poland and a talk with Kennedy:

"Mr. Kennedy, who made me understand his views were based on a number of talks with most important persons, declared that he was convinced that in case Poland were to decide in favor of armed resistance to Germany, especially as regards Danzig, it would draw England in its wake."

Document quoting Polish commercial attache, Jan Wszelaki, on 45-minute conversation with Kennedy, June 6, 1938:

"In his (Kennedy's) opinion, Germany's turning away from her policies, including financial and economic, would be tantamount to a lost war.

"On the other hand, he gave her at least certain prospects of attaining her demands by force . . . he spoke with a certain disdain of optimists who thought Germany could be defeated easily or quickly or who counted on a quick revolution in Germany . . .

Can "Count on Poles"

"The Ambassador said we (the Poles) were the only people in eastern Europe on whose armaments, as well as their military value, one could count on with total assurance . . .

"He added he would see the prime minister and Lord Halifax and insist upon the necessity of helping Poland with cash.

"In conclusion the Ambassador told me his two sons, who recently had traveled all over Europe and had seen and learned much, intended to return to the United States to deliver a series of lectures at Harvard University concerning the situation in Eurpoe and individual states.

"The Ambassador attached much importance to these lectures as an element of forming American opinion. . . .

Copy of a purported telegram (only one of the 16 documents, in English) by Sir Howard Kennard, former Ambassador to Poland, to London on April 2, 1935, beginning with the words "following from Mr. Eden" and reporting on a talk between Eden and Marshall Pilsudski:

"The marshal appeared to wish that Britain should occupy herself with her colonies and not follow Lloyd George's bad example. . . .

"I (Eden) told him that for our part we wished nothing better than to leave Europe to her own troubles but that our experience was that those troubles had an unhappy knack of involving our own country. The marshal didn't dissent."

Young Named As District Commissioner

President Chooses Veteran Journalist To Succeed Allen

own age, he should begin public life before it is too late, as he would be fairly old before the question of a third term arose. His appointment is for a three-year term.

Young, a Republican, was asked to make a speech. He replied that he hoped there was no political significance in his appointment, and that he would fill the position to the best of his ability.

His duties in the $9,000-a-year job will be the same as Allen's. His main responsibilities will be supervision over the Board of Public Welfare, the Health Department and the Corporation Counsel's Office. The whole problem of local relief thus will fall on his shoulders, as well as Gallinger Hospital and Glenn Dale Sanatoria for tuberculosis sufferers. Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners, who is now ill, has charge of the Police and Fire departments, the Traffic Director's Office, and purchasing and auditing functions, while Col. David McCoach, jr., Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., is the Engineer Commissioner.

The appointee's father, James Rankin Young, was at one time a Congressman from Pennsylvania. Both his father and his uncle, the late John Russell Young, who was once Librarian of Congress, were in their day famous newspapermen.

The family of his mother, Mary Barclay Young, have lived in Washington for four generations. His grandfather, John M. Barclay, was Journal Clerk of the House for 30 years.

Young was educated in the Washington public schools, Central Manual Training School and the Industrial Art School, Philadelphia.

His first newspaper job here was on The Washington Post. This was from 1905 to 1907. His assignment was the District Building. He began his newspaper career, however, as a reporter for the Philadelphia Evening Star in 1901. From 1902 to 1904 he was a reporter on the Philadelphia Inquirer.

He joined the staff of the Evening Star in 1907, thereafter was on the old Washington Times, transferred again to The Post, joined the Washington bureau of the International News Service, and for a period of five years or so was in the advertising business.

In 1918 and 1919 he was assistant city editor of the Star, and since the latter part of 1920 has covered the White House for that paper.

He has enjoyed the confidence of five Presidents, has traveled extensively and has a wide acquaintance among public men.

Heads Correspondents

Young has been three times president of the White House Correspondents' Association. He is a Mason, a member of the Knights of Pythias, the National Press Club, of which he is a charter member, the Overseas Writers, the Gridiron Club and the Alfalfa Club. He was a member of the National Press Club's first board of governors, serving in that capacity for three years.

He is the third member of the Gridiron Club, and the fifth newspaperman appointed to a District commissionership. Other newspapermen were Henry Litchfield West, formerly political writer for The Post, and Henry B. F. Macfarland, both Gridironers, and Oliver Newman and Louis Brownlow.

Young is married and makes his home at 1834 Jefferson place northwest. He has a daughter, Mrs. Carl Shepard, and one son, John Russell Young, jr., of the State Department.

Citizens' Groups Pleased

Spokesmen for citizens' associations were particularly pleased that in appointing the White House newsman, the President recognized their united plea for a "bona fide" District resident.

Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the District Bar Association, and James E. Colliflower, vice president of the Washington Board of Trade, joined with the civic associations in commending the President's choice. Lawrence E. Williams, president of the trade body, was out of town.

Hill said he understood Young had been a resident here for a "long time" and that he had the proper qualifications. Colliflower said "I know he will make a splendid Commissioner."

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said the appointee was "thoroughly familiar with the municipal setup" and had the qualifications "for a successful Commissioner."

"I am most pleased, however, that President Roosevelt saw fit to appoint a truly 'bona fide' District resident," Stull said.

One expression of disappointment was registered by Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. Maryland-District Industrial Council. He said the President was "hasty" in his appointment and that he should have "given the citizens a chance to get up a slate of candidates."

"I think, also, the President should have appointed a man from among the labor ranks," Katz said.

Calvert Says He's Glad

A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, said he was glad the President had made an "early" appointment.

"I am glad the situation was settled quickly instead of allowing the vacancy to become a political football," Calvert stated.

"I wanted to see a man appointed who would do a good job and I honestly believe that Mr. Young is the man."

Harry S. Wender, vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said it was a good appointment. He added:

"I am particularly glad that the President has recognized the pleas of Washington for appointment of a 'real' resident. Although I have not had the pleasure of knowing Mr. Young, I do know of his work and qualifications. He has a wide knowledge of the intricacies of government and will make a splendid Commissioner."

Munter's Comment

Godfrey L. Munter, president of the Chevy Chase Citizens' Association, which has the largest membership in the city, said he was glad the President appointed a bona fide resident.

"Our association was the first in the city to advocate the appointment of a bona fide resident and we are particularly pleased that President Roosevelt has done so," he said.

D. W. Gabelein, president of the Chillum Heights Citizens' Association, added his praise for the appointment. James E. Maxwell, president of the American University Park Citizens' Association, said he would personally support Young in his new job.

"Being a newspaperman, Mr. Young certainly knows what's going on in the District and will make a good Commissioner," Maxwell said.

H. W. Austin, president of the Bradbury Heights Citizens' Association, and Robert J. Hellmuth, president of Anacostia Citizens' Association, also expressed approval.

British Turn 2 Soviet Ships Over to French for Inspection

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, March 29.—Relations between Britain and Russia became increasingly shaky tonight as the British handed over to their French ally two confiscated Soviet freighters and got ready to round up German ships attempting to dash from the Netherlands East Indies to Vladivostok.

Soviet sources, on the other hand, emphasized two factors:

Foremost, "despite the newspapers," Russia has no political or military commitments with Germany and is not her ally.

Russia is eager for "increased trade and friendly relations with Great Britain," although no pact is being formulated.

Blackening Charged

But it seems to be evident, the Russian sources added, that Britain and France have embarked on a "treat-Russia-rough" campaign, and that a deliberate attempt is being made to "blacken Soviet Russia in the eyes of the British people and the world."

The two Russian merchantmen, disposition of which lay at the heart of the controversy, are the 2,492-ton Selenga and the 3,972-ton Vladimir Mayakovsky, released by the British today to the French navy "for administrative reasons" and expected to be taken from Hongkong to Hanoi or some other French Indo-China port.

The ships, laden with metals such as tin, antimony and tungsten which are vital in the manufacture of munitions and arms, were intercepted in the Far East while en route to Vladivostok. The Vladimir Mayakovsky came from the United States and Mexico.

Dash Expected

The British said the French navy has "more bases in the Pacific," thus is better able to continue contraband examination of the vessels.

Naval men then took sharp notice of reports that at least 20 German freighters were getting set to try a dash from Netherlands East Indies to Vladivostok with cargoes meant for Germany.

Concerning British-Russian trade, a reliable Russian source here declared: "It is not true that a British-Russian trade pact is being formulated."

"The truth is," he said, "when Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky discussed detention of the Russian ships with British Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs R. A. Butler on February 22 and with Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax on March 27, he emphasized on each occasion Russia's eagerness for increased commerce with Britain and her willingness to frame trade agreements with Britain or any nation."

There was considerable bitterness in the comment by some Soviet sources on what they termed British "evasion" of Maisky's questions on the Selenga and the Vladimir Mayakovsky.

They emphasized the "clarity" of the Russian position.

One Detained Since Jan. 19

Maisky, they said, had told Butler and Halifax that the ships were state-owned and had given his word their cargoes were intended for the Soviet government and not for re-export to Germany, via Siberia.

Despite these declarations, Soviet officials declared, Great Britain "evaded the issue and turned the ships over to France after one of them, the Selenga, had been detained since January 13."

Furthermore, Soviet sources pointed out, Russia has nothing to do with the intentions of German ships preparing to run from the Dutch East Indies for Vladivostok through sealanes already heavily patrolled by British and French men o' war.

German Ships Loading

Copyright by New York Times

Amsterdam, March 29.—According to dispatches from the Dutch East Indies a large number of German ships are loading in Java and Sumatra, where German agents recently made large purchases of raw materials, mainly copra, kapok, rubber and palm oil.

It is believed that the Germans intend to break the British blockade by sending the boats to Vladivostok.

Most of the German ships, in the Dutch East Indies since the beginning of the war, are being hurriedly prepared for sailing. The ships have been painted gray, their names painted out, and they are taking abroad larger reserves of coal. Many of them, however, are being sequestered for nonpayment of port dues and unpaid fuel supply bills.

Bill Offers Teeth for D. C. Wage Law

will be sent to the Budget Bureau.

Although the maximum time a woman is permitted to work in a week—48 hours—remains the same, the proposed bill has teeth in it. Under its provisions, an employer could be imprisoned for 60 days for working a women overtime or for disciplining in any way women employes who complain of violations by their employers to the wage board.

Mahorner said each day on which the offense continues would constitute a separate offense and each woman employed overtime create a separate offense.

He stressed that woman workers in the following trade groups are not included under the law: agricultural field workers, domestic servants in private homes, graduate nurses working in hospitals, or women earning $35 a week or more guaranteed wage.

The new and rigid features of the bill follow:

Every employer would be required to post an abstract of the law, together with a complete schedule of each employe's working hours, lunch periods and days off.

These schedules must be approved by the wage board and any change first approved by the board.

Appearance of an employe on the employer's premise outside of working hours shall be prima facie evidence of a violation of the act. (There is some fear this provision may be unconstitutional.)

The board and its inspectors are given authority to go into any employer's establishment, investigate complaints and institute legal proceedings. Subpena power is given the board.

Every employer must keep a complete employment record for at least one year, showing his employer's work schedule and lunch hours.

If an employer refuses to disclose information required by the board, contempt proceedings can be instituted in the courts.

Citizens Glad 'A Local Man' Replaced Allen

Southeast Meeting, Called to Boost Lee, Hails Young Instead

A meeting of Southeast citizens, called last night to boost the appointment of Adelbert W. Lee as District Commissioner, was canceled, but part of the crowd stayed to express satisfaction that "a local man" received the appointment.

William A. Maio, president of the Southeast Citizens Association, who called the meeting, said of the appointment of J. Russell Young to the post: "I'm glad it was a local man. And I think he will make a good Commissioner. I believe he is well versed in conditions and in civic affairs here. I'm sure he'll cooperate with the citizens' groups."

Lee, former president of the Southeast Council, said: "We find a lot of satisfaction in knowing that a local man has been selected."

The association indorsed Lee at a meeting Tuesday night.

A. J. Driscoll, president of the Midcity Citizens Association, who came to the meeting, said: "Mr. Young was active in our association for a number of years when he lived in that section. He served as chairman of legislation for the association and appeared at Congressional hearings. He is civic-minded, and, to my way of thinking, he is going to make a good Commissioner."

Peace Hope Slim, Roosevelt Says

be scant immediate prospect for the establishment of any just, stable and lasting peace in Europe, the information made available to this Government as a result of Mr. Welles' mission will undoubtedly be of the greatest value when the time comes for the establishment of such a peace.

"To Mr. Welles go my thanks and full appreciation for carrying out this difficult mission with extraordinary tact and understanding and in accordance with the best American diplomatic traditions."

Immediately, the President's reference to probable "more friendly relations" in "certain instances" was taken to imply possibly a forthcoming appointment of an Ambassador to Germany and, presumably, the return of Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, German Ambassador, to the United States. The two countries have been without ambassadors in each other's capitals since Hugh Wilson was called home more than a year ago, and later resigned. The summons home was taken generally as a protest against German policies. Dr. Dieckhoff shortly after was called back to Berlin, the reason given being that he was to report on the changed American attitude toward the Nazi regime.

However, publication later in the day of the German White Paper in an apparent design to blame this country in part for the beginning of the European war, seemed to some observers to throw a different light on the probability of improved Berlin-Washington relations.

pocket and demanded "what you've got?" . . .

The bandit went to the cash register when Wolf said there was no money in the place. While he was at the cash drawer, Bick came in and Wolf used that moment to run for help.

The bandit stuffed the bills in his pocket and fled. After a chase of almost a block, the suspect was knocked to the sidewalk by Wolf's tackle. He had no weapon.

The robbery of Emile Couillard, 28-year-old driver for M. Wall & Son, beauty supply dealers in the Tower Building, was also reported.

Couillard said he was attacked by an armed colored man at Eighteenth street and Florida avenue northwest. The robber took about $50 in collections from him before fleeing through an alley.

The two Washington men who allegedly robbed a Bethesda store employe while posing as detectives were sent to the Rockville jail charged with larceny of a store employe.

The men were Garlow L. Goble, 27, of 2550 Fourteenth street northwest, and William J. Steinbaugh, 38, of 3234 Thirteenth street northwest.

Calvin Spruill, employe of the Meadowbrook Market, Bethesda, told police he was accosted by the two men March 16 in front of the Bank of Bethesda, where he had just drawn $175 in change.

The suspects were arrested by Lieut. John Fowler on the description of the car supplied by Spruill.

Metropolitan police last night also announced arrest yesterday of a 39-year-old man in connection with a series of liquor store holdups. He was reported "positively identified" in a lineup last night by Meyer Landay, proprietor, and George Belk, clerk, of a liquor store at 467 H street northeast, robbed recently of $70. A second man is under arrest in the same connection.

Japan Installs Wang Regime In Nanking

By the Associated Press

Nanking (Saturday), March 30.—An "all-China" Japanese-sponsored regime, headed by former Chinese Premier Wang Ching-wei, was proclaimed here today at brief ceremonies which proceeded without untoward incident.

The new regime with the backing of the Japanese army, is dedicated to the effort to end 33 months of war between Japan and China and to establish a new economic relationship between the two countries, with Japan playing a dominating role in the development of China's resources and industry.

In Shanghai international defense forces, including United States Marines, were out in full strength to quell any renewal of disturbances and terrorism that marked the early stages in the Japanese political moves.

Within sight of the Japanese-guarded walls of Nanking unidentified persons believed to have been Chinese guerrillas loosened rails which overturned the locomotive and three coaches of a Japanese operated train bearing new regime officials, Japanese supporters and foreign correspondents to the city. Only a few Chinese passengers were injured. Japanese soldiers summoned to the scene failed to find any guerrillas.

In a broadcast from Chungking the national government president, Lin Sen, bitterly denounced Wang Ching-wei and declared that he and Chiang Kai-shek would lead the entire nation to "fight to the end for China's liberty, sovereignty and territorial integrity." He appealed to the world to continue supporting China, which would "live on despite the Japanese and their puppets."

Liquor Board Hearing

Richard H. Lansdale, secretary, has announced that the Liquor Control Board for Montgomery County will hold a public hearing at the Liquor Dispensary Building, Silver Spring, at 2:15 p. m. on April 15 on an application of Mrs. Ruth M. Hitchcock for a license to sell beer and light wines at the corner of Falls and River roads, Potomac.

Grand Jury to Start Gypsum Probe

Several witnesses called in the Government's investigation of an alleged nation-wide combination to dominate the gypsum industry will testify today before a special grand jury.

The testimony will conclude the first phase of a broad investigation in charge of Special Assistant Attorneys General George B. Haddock and Grant W. Kelliher.

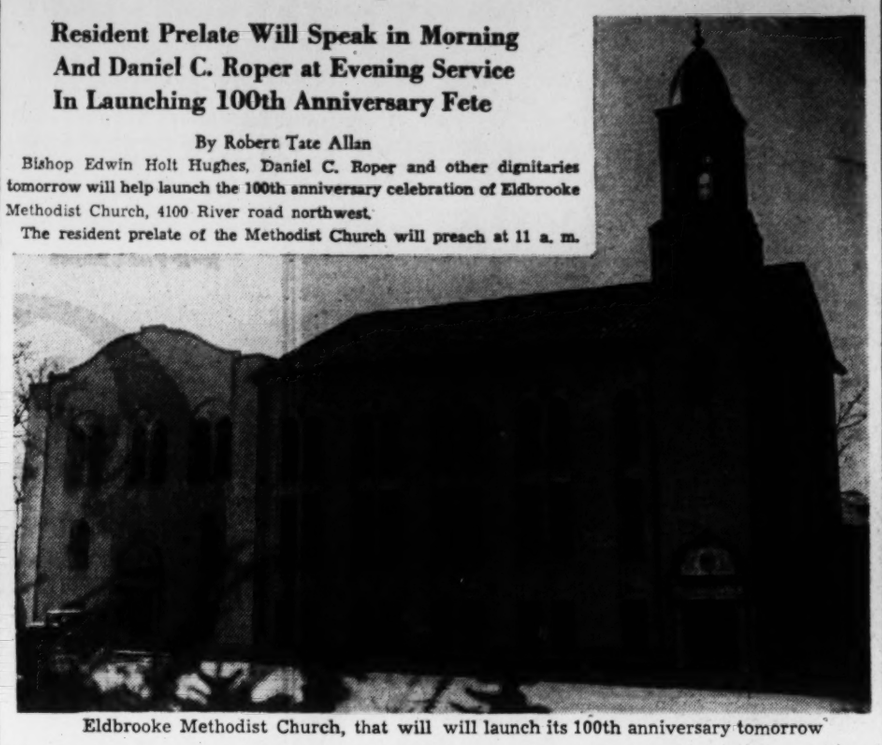
By Robert Tate Allan

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Daniel C. Roper and other dignitaries tomorrow will help launch the 100th anniversary celebration of Eldbrooke Methodist Church, 4100 River road northwest.

The resident prelate of the Methodist Church will preach at 11 a. m.



Eldbrooke Methodist Church, that will will launch its 100th anniversary tomorrow and the former Secretary of Commerce and one-time Minister to Canada at 8 p. m., with Dr. Walter M. Michael, pastor of the congregation, presiding.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, New York City, will deliver an address on Monday at 8 p. m.; Dr. Raymond J. Seegar, of the George Washing University faculty, on Wednesday at the same hour at services sponsored by the District Organized Bible Class Association; and the Rev. Lloyd C. Davis and Dr. Ralph Dela Smith at former pasters' night on Thursday. Wives of former pastors also will be honored.

Mr. Davis is pastor of the Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Church, and Dr. Smith, of Woodside (formerly Sligo) Methodist Church, both congreations naving figured prominently in the life of Eldebrooke Church, once known as the Tenleytown Church.

Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the West Washington District of the Methodist Church, will speak on Sunday, April 7, at 11 a. m., and Dr. Edgar Cordell Powers, grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Masons in Maryland, at "Fraternal Night" exercises that evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. Powers is a former pastor.

Among Washington's most notable congregations, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal branch prior to Methodist Unification last April, Eldebrooke's founding was closely identified with Methodism in Georgetown, Tenleytown being until 1855 member of a circuit under the Dumbarton Avenue parent church.

Earlier, however, from 1832 to 1835, according to James Kirkley's book on "Methodism in Georgetown," Sunday school classes were held in a house on Loughborough road, now Van Ness street. The West Georgetown Circuit, formed in 1855, included the West Georgetown Church at Thirty-fifth and T streets and the Tenleytown Church.

As in many other churches, the Civil War played havoc with the religious life of Tenleytown, causing suspension of services and other difficulties. History records that the present building, on the back of which are remnants of rifle pits and breastworks, was utilized as an army hospital. Sunday school services were resumed on July 8, 1863. The site on which the present church rests was acquired in 1865.

Tenleytown and West Washington separated in 1873, a new circuit being formed, which included Tenleytown, Little Falls and Sligo. Reunited in the same circuit in 1877, West Georgetown and Tenleytown continued together until 1890.

The original church was remodeled in 1899 during the pastorate of the Rev. H. E. R. Reck. In 1917 the $617 balance on the old church debt was paid off, the mortgage papers going up in smoke with gala ceremonies.

About that time, sentiment favored renaming of the church. George Burdette suggested it be changed to Eldbrooke, honoring two men long prominent in the congregation's life. They were Aquila Eld, who died in 1879, and Philip L. Brooke, who passed away in 1903.

A tremendous increase in membership from 1921 to 1924, when the Rev. John E. Fort was pastor, brought about consideration of plans for a more adequate edifice. It was decided to place it on the old site, the final worship rites being held in that building on November 1, 1925, while the Rev. Charles L. Pate was spiritual leader.

The present edifice, of mission style design, had its cornerstone laid on April 24, 1926, with the Rev. Mr. Pate assisting Dr. J. Phelps Hand, then superintendent of the then Methodist Episcopal Church, in the exercises. The building's approximate cost was $180,000.

Native of Frederick County, Md., and graduate of Frederick High School, Dr. Michael was graduated from Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., while he was preaching at Glyndon, Md. Earlier, he served pulpits in Oldtown, and Urbana, Md. In 1938 he received an honorary degree of doctor of divinity from his alma mater.

During his pastorate at Brightwood Park Methodist Church here, from 1927 to 1931, his first wife passed away, and, upon becoming pastor of the Eldbrooke Church in 1931, he married Mrs. Charles O. Paxson, a widow, who had been active at Brightwood Church.

The pastor has five children, four of them by his first wife, who was a daughter of a clergyman. They are Marion, student at Boston University School of Theology and assistant pastor at the Harvard Street Methodist Church, Boston; Mary Alice, student at the University of Maryland Hospital, Baltimore; Ruth, junior at Woodrow Wilson High School; Barbara Lou, Janney School student, and Pierce.

"JESUS LOVES ME"
ANNA B. WARNER

Jesus loves me! this I know,
For the Bible tells me so;
Little ones to Him belong,
They are weak, but He is strong
Yes, Jesus loves me,
Yes, Jesus loves me,
Yes, Jesus loves me,
The Bible tells me so

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

For more than half a century children all over the world, even to the interior mountains of China, have loved this hymn, and today missionaries teach it to converts wherever they go. It was written by Anna B. Warner who wrote many bible stories, but would be remembered for this if she had written nothing else.

WOMEN: don't miss these Sunday Post features in the section for you alone!

How Anna Neagle, Hollywood's "Best Dressed," Does It

"Dress to suit yourself . . . not others." That's the formula of Anna Neagle, recently elected Hollywood's best dressed woman. Marshall Adams, Post fashion editor, tells you all about Miss Neagle in Sunday's Post, and shows in pictures the wardrobe that won her the honor. Anna Neagle's tips to women and her "dos and don'ts" in dressing make interesting and instructive reading.

Preview of Debs

Dudley Harmon's popular "About the Town" column is devoted these Sundays to presentations of the girls who will be coming out in June. Summer is becoming popular as a time for a debut, and here are the debutantes who will be crowding the brides for society's attention soon.

Mrs. Farley—Next White House Occupant?

Elizabeth Finnegan Farley is the wife of one of the most popular men in public life. Yet she is the least known, least understood Cabinet wife. She doesn't even live in Washington—has steadfastly refused to leave New York. Hope Ridings Miller's article in the Sunday Post, sixth in her series on possible First Ladies, brings you closer to this one Administration wife who cares nothing for Washington society.

Jilted Girl Turns To Mary Haworth

First, a romance with an engaged man. Next, the "great love"—but she lost him. Third, another engaged man. Now a co-worker first fascinated then dropped her. What should the girl do to win him back? That's Mary Haworth's' problem in this Sunday's Post, and you'll find both the girl's letter and Miss Haworth's reply full of human interest.

"Gentler Sex" Touches Lightly on Women's Foibles

This Sunday, Malvina Lindsay's humorous column gives you a satiric picture of the new Washington party vogue—inviting guests according to their husband's standing in the Presidential polls.

And Twelve Other Women's Features!

A column by novelist Katherine Brush. D. C. Women in Athletics. Alice Hughes' New York column. Costume of the Country—what women wear in foreign lands. Society columns by Nina Carter Tabb (Hunt Country), Elizabeth Henney (Service Set), Betty Beale (Top Hats and Tiaras), Carolyn Bell (Diplomats). "Introducing"—news about Washington's newcomers. Club page, edited by Jessie Ash Arndt. "Madame Chairman," by Suzanne. Club Calendar.

and the whole family wants Sunday's Post for these:

Amusements: Movies and Radio

Name the Hollywood column you like best. Chances are, it's in The Post. For Sunday's Post brings you Hollywood columns by Jimmie Fidler, Louella Parsons, Hedda Hopper, as well as a Hollywood article by Lucie Neville, a page of news comment and pictures about local movies, and a screen bill for the week! And don't miss Richard Coe's column Sunday on "Grapes of Wrath." This Amusement Section also contains columns by Damon Runyon, Lucius Beebe, Leonard Lyons, Richard Watts and Weare Holbrook, radio news and timetable, and a serial story installment. Then there are pages on Schools, Travel, Art and Music, Gardens, Organization news and Army and Navy activities, and Hobbies. There's a section jam-packed with interest for everyone!

Sports: News, Pictures, Columns

The morning Post is conceded to have Washington's finest sports pages, because of the many wire services and because of the top-notch columns by Povich and Considine. The Sunday Post sports section is even better—because bigger. More news, more pictures, more columnists. Besides Povich, Considine, and Postscripts, the Sunday Post brings you regularly Bill Ackerman's fishing column, Merrell Whittlesey's column on golf, Anne Hagner's on horse shows, George Berner's on dogs. Racing, baseball, hockey, each sport in its season, all are covered thoroughly in news, pictures, and comment in The Sunday Post.

Real Estate, Finance

The Washington Post's Sunday Real Estate Section is the largest in America. This complete selection of houses for sale is a boon to home seekers. Real estate and financial news, classified advertisements and financial tables complete this section.

Rotogravure

Featured in the Rotogravure section of Sunday's Post: Historic homes of Alexandria, open to the public for the annual April tour. Migrant workers of the East, comparable to Steinbeck's "Okies." Hollywood fashions. Bombs. And other pictures from all over the world.

Comics in Color

King of the Royal Mounted, the new Post comic, appears for the first time this Sunday. Almost all of the daily Post comics appear on Sunday, too, and there are such notable additions as "Smitty," "Prince Valiant" and "Smokey Stover." You'll like the Sunday comics.

Our Churches in Pictures

with emphasis on the youngsters

Washington churches make a deliberate appeal to youth, from the kindergartners on up to the young people in their first jobs. Almost half of this week's eight pages of church pictures, in The Sunday Post's "Our Town" section, is devoted to youth in the church. For example, there are pictures of: Boy Scouts at Hamline Methodist Church. Young people's recreational activities at the Mormon Temple. Altar boys at St. Patrick's. Religious instruction for Jewish children. Sunday school at Emory Methodist Church. Nursery school at the First Unitarian Church.

The Post goes to church with a suburban family, shows a day in the life of a sexton, pictures the work of a preacher's wife. The Catholic Evidence Guild and the Lutheran Brotherhood, the installation of a Catholic archbishop and the building of an Episcopalian cathedral, an interior view of Metropolitan Baptist Church, with the congregation, and interior pictures of windows and altars, Washington's Chinese church—all go to make up an absorbing picture story of Washington's religious world.

News: Local, National, Foreign

The Post not only covers Washington news but sometimes is able to initiate it, as was the case in the recent "Babies for Sale," narcotics and traffic series. In its facilities for presenting national and foreign news, The Post is unexcelled, with five sources of news—Associated Press, United Press, International News Service, New York Herald Tribune Service, and New York Times Special War News Service.

Special Articles, Editorials, Gallup

Sunday's Gallup Polls in The Post report present American sentiment toward the Allies and also measure political sentiment in Iowa and Minnesota. This Sunday's Post section also contains the editorial page, book page, the War Review, a page of foreign correspondence, and columns by Ernest Lindley, Mark Sullivan, Robert Albright. There are always special articles on current topics.

The New Commissioner

John Russell Young is not the first local newspaper man to be appointed a Commissioner of the District of Columbia. And there is every reason to suppose that Mr. Young will fill the post as successfully as others of his calling who have preceded him in this office.

Certainly the appointment is nonpolitical, evidence of which is the fact that Mr. Young was once offered the same position by President Coolidge. And equally it meets the important consideration that the District Commissioners from now on should be Washingtonians, starting office with some clear idea of the peculiar needs and problems of the local community.

When this is said, however, it remains true that this appointment is wholly unexpected, and that the name of Mr. Young had not been mentioned among those whom various local groups have been discussing, though without any indication of agreement, as potential Commissioners. To note this is in no sense to reflect on the character and capacities of Mr. Young. But the choice does indicate that President Roosevelt regards the position as one which does not require unusual consideration.

Washington should take that indication to heart. There is perhaps too prevalent an opinion that the serious problems of municipal government here can be solved merely by appointing outstanding men to the available offices. The bitter truth is, of course, that until the fundamental setup is revised it does not greatly matter who nominally operates the machinery, provided they can make good speeches and are pleasant and genial gentlemen.

On that score, beyond question, Mr. Young will carry on the best traditions of past Commissioners.

Statistical Mystery

The Department of Commerce has published its preliminary estimates on the balance of payments for 1939, showing net receipts and payments due on trade account, gold and silver shipment, and capital movements.

Owing to the United States for merchandise account—that is for an excess of exports over imports—was the sum of $859,000,000. Net payments due from this country to foreigners, however, on service account reduced this total to $727,000,000. Yet during the year we received $3,040,000,000 of gold and a small amount of silver on net balance.

The gold influx should be accounted for by the inflow of capital, except to the extent that it represents payment for exported goods and services. But the Department of Commerce has been able to trace a net capital inflow of only $1,232,000,000, leaving a so-called residual item of $1,151,000,000 unexplained. This is a huge discrepancy—the largest ever recorded—and the usefulness of the estimates is seriously impaired as a result.

The incomplete estimates indicate that the net capital inflow in 1939 was about four time that of the preceding year, while the unexplained residual item was over twice as great. It is generally assumed that the residual figure largely represents unrecorded capital movements. If that is true, we probably received over $2,000,000,000 of capital last year on net balance from foreign countries.

It is known that capital has been transferred to this country in devious ways to avoid identification of the owners. That, no doubt, accounts in part for the discrepancy in the balance of payments. The Department of Commerce also suggests that gold imports may in some cases go into bank accounts, and be drawn upon immediately to pay for exports, with the result of obscuring the relationship between gold and capital movements.

Financial experts point out that it is most important to keep track of capital movements, especially as an outward flow of funds on a large scale is anticipated when the war is over. Undoubtedly, the Department of Commerce is making every effort to repair the gaps in its reporting service. But in the present upset state of world affairs, it faces a very difficult task.

Not An Economy Move

The House is no longer in an economy-minded mood. That is evident from the substantial majorities by which it voted to add an extra $50,000,000 to the budget estimates for the CCC and over $17,000,000 for the National Youth Administration. Its action in paring the budgetary estimates for the NLRB is, therefore, generally regarded as being primarily a disciplinary measure.

The lengthy and often bitter debate over Representative Murdock's amendment to restore part of the $337,000 cut from the NLRB appropriation made it evident that economy was not the controlling consideration in this particular instance. The chief target of attack was the Division of Economic Research of the NLRB, headed by David J. Saposs, one of the left-wingers in a key governmental post who has come under the fire of the Dies Committee. In bringing in its recommendations the Committee on Appropriations expressed the opinion that "no need exists for a division of economic research and it is expected that this section will be entirely eliminated."

This proceeding was sharply criticized from the floor as a deliberate effort to hamstring the NLRB and specifically to deprive Dr. Saposs of his job. Although a spokesman for the committee denied any such intention that, of course, would be the effect of following its recommendations. And opponents of the Murdock amendment openly expressed a hope that no money would be voted to pay the salary of Dr. Saposs.

Obviously the qualifications of Dr. Saposs for his position are a matter for separate determination. His fate should not be circuitously decided by the deletion of an appropriation item. Furthermore, if the Division of Economic Research is to be eliminated, it should be done directly.

There appear to be decided differences of opinion as to the need of a separate research organization for the NLRB. Dr. Lubin, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, has testified that the work of the Saposs agency does not involve any duplication of effort. But it does seem probable that the Department of Labor could accomplish any desirable extra research very much more cheaply. It is time to draw public attention to the plethora of overlapping governmental research organizations which taken together are adding substantial sums to the swollen budget.

However, the questions raised should be threshed out thoroughly before action is taken to do away with a research division that the heads of the NLRB, including the experienced Dr. Leiserson, regard as important for efficient functioning.

Sterling Vagaries

After dropping below $3.45 last Wednesday the quotation for "free" sterling, as distinguished from the official rate, advanced the next day to $3.60 and yesterday was slightly below the latter figure. This sharp depreciation of sterling in relation to the dollar has aroused considerable anxiety in official circles, since it gives the British an advantage in export markets.

Secretary Hull has already announced that the safeguarding provision of the trade treaty with Great Britain might be invoked if there were evidence that depreciation of sterling had unfavorably affected the industries or commerce of the United States. That warning may have some effect, but it has to be remembered that the British are under tremendous pressure to secure foreign exchange balances by increasing their exports.

To the extent that they receive payment for their goods in heavily depreciated pounds, they are better able to surmount tariff barriers. Furthermore, they will have an advantage over American industries in such neutral markets as South America.

The recent announcement by the British government of an extension of exchange control seems to account for the sharpness of recent declines. British sellers of many important products, such as rubber, tin and jute, are now compelled to take payment in the currencies of the countries to which shipments are made. These foreign balances are then taken over by the British control and the exporter receives sterling quoted at the official rate.

The result of thus restricting the use of free sterling has been a great increase in pressure to dispose of sterling balances which are no longer acceptable in payment of various important commodities.

All these operations are highly disturbing to trading groups in all parts of the world. But it has to be remembered that this war is one in which economic weapons play a very important role. It is not to be expected that belligerents will forego any strategic advantages obtainable through manipulation of the exchanges, therefore, except as fear of retaliatory protective measures restrains them.

Curious Delay

It would be premature as yet to express any opinion on the Polish foreign office documents, seized by the Germans when Warsaw was captured, which were released to the press in Berlin last night. Their authenticity is not to be taken for granted and the full texts will have to be examined before any conclusions can properly be drawn.

Nevertheless it is significant that the German authorities should have chosen this moment for disclosures which are said to indicate that the Roosevelt Administration was not averse to seeing Germany's steady expansion resisted by force of arms. The documents which purport to show this must have been in the possession of Germany for six months now. Why, if they are important, has their publication been so long withheld?

There are two possible explanations. One is that the Polish documents, authentic or otherwise, were held up with the belief that they might effectively influence American opinion in the approaching Presidential campaign. The other is that the Germans waited until they believed, rightly or wrongly, that American public opinion is becoming increasingly indifferent to the outcome of the war in Europe, provided only that the United States can continue to avoid involvement.

Either explanation, or both in combination, would explain why this diplomatic correspondence has been held unpublished in Berlin for six months. And judgment on the documents, when their full text is available, will have to take into account the presumable reasons for giving them publicity at this particular moment.

Word Into Deed

Last Monday Archbishop Curley, on his installation as head of the new archdiocese of Washington, spoke of the obligation of Christian love and sympathy which binds the Catholic to his neighbor "whether Jew, Protestant or unbeliever."

Two days later the interior of St. Peter's Church in Southeast Washington, one of the oldest Catholic edifices in the city, was ravaged and destroyed by fire. Wednesday evening, while conducting the midweek services at Foundry Methodist Church, the pastor, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, reminded his congregation of a certain historic association between their own parish and the nearly contemporaneous Catholic parish.

He suggested that his parishioners might wish to make a contribution to the restoration of St. Peter's. The congregation responded warmly and later that evening a check for the "Methodist mite," as Dr. Harris called it, went forward to Msgr. Eugene J. Connelly.

Thus within 24 hours the lesson in good will uttered by a Catholic prelate had been given a most effective illustration by a group of local Protestants.

It's a wonder the woodpeckers don't take advantage of many a candidate who takes his hat off and throws it into the ring.

If you talk horse sense these days, most people will give you the horse laugh.

The Supreme Sacrifice

From the Hartford Courant.

Reports have arrived from Paris that partial prohibition is being enforced in the city. Three days a week the Frenchman has to do without his aperitif, which means that three days a week his life really is not worth living. He can still drop into the Cafe de la Paix and watch the crowds that invariably gather in the Place de l'Opera, or he can take his evening walk through Montmartre. But his "raison d'etre" is gone. At noon, he may still find his friends at his favorite cafe, waiting for the usual discussion of national affairs. But nobody is likely to wax eloquent without an aperitif in front of him, even though argument is the very heart of a Frenchman's happiness.

Many aspersions have been cast on the seriousness of the present war, with its lack of actual conflict, especially by American commentators. But there is no longer any doubt that the Frenchman has decided to put his whole effort into the struggle. Now, if the Englishman should have to give up his glass of bitters, the combination of enraged Allies would be invincible, and Hitler would do best to follow the course of discretion.

Handicapped Children

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On March 21 your paper in cooperation with the R.-K.-O.-Keiths Theater was responsible for a very fine and noble act of kindness to the many handicapped children in Washington, D. C. Hundreds of these children on that day were transported to and from the theater to witness the performance of "Pinocchio."

As a mother of one of these handicapped children I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to every one who helped to make this wonderful treat possible for these children. I feel sure this expresses the sentiment of all the parents.

The Washington Post is to be congratulated for the publicity given the "handicapped" children's cause which has helped greatly to get the House Appropriation Committee to include a $15,000 item in the budget for teachers for shut-ins in homes and hospitals.

Especially do I want to thank the city editor and Mr. Gerald Gross for his courtesy and attention always willingly given to and for these children.

Again many thanks for everything and more power to The Washington Post.

MRS. FLORENCE E. WELCH.

The Gibbon Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post this morning, a letter relative to your editorial, "Smoke Without Fire," was signed only Charles L. Coltman. That letter was sent as a communication from an alumni committee. Mr. Coltman has been authorized to transmit our communications to the press and to various individuals.

You will appreciate, of course, that his signature as an individual does not carry the weight which attaches to a letter from a committee representing a very considerable proportion of the alumni of the George Washington University.

J. ALICE WHITMAN, '35.
Washington, March 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The ardent supporters of Miss Martha Gibbon have been presenting her case to the public by way of your letter column. Solely on the evidence before us, can we, the general public, form our opinion as to her qualifications as a teacher of English composition?

In her letter to The Post Miss Gibbon says:

"You are probably entirely right in ignoring Dr. Marvin's verbal assurances that I need not get the Ph. D., and it would not stand in the way of my progress."

To what does "it" refer?

DISINTERESTED READER.
Washington, March 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Smoke Without Fire," fails to illustrate the unbiased judgment for which The Washington Post is recognized. The smoke of indignation hanging over George Washington University has arisen from a burning resentment caused by the "resignation" of an undeniably fine English teacher, Miss Martha Gibbon.

Surely you do not consider this to be a trivial loss. No university has too many superior teachers, and we cannot afford to lose Miss Gibbon. The "carefully promoted publicity" in the Gibbon case has but one aim: Students, past and present, protest the injustice of her resignation. As for the American Association of University Professors, is that not the one organization to consider the Gibbon case seriously, and to establish beyond doubt the right or wrong done?

Miss Gibbon, we are confident, would stand high as associate professor of English at any university. At G. W. U. for 11 years students have been privileged to study with her. Now, both for ourselves and for future students, we want Miss Gibbon to remain.

We have a proper concern in the Gibbon case. Do not forget that at G. W. U. more than at most universities it is the students who pay the teacher's salary, and we have a right to protest our loss.

HELEN DILLON.
Secretary, Student Committee on the Gibbon case.
Washington, March 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The case of Miss Gibbon, of George Washington University, is rapidly becoming a cause celebre, and that is as it should be. Having spent my entire four college years at George Washington as one of Dr. Marvin's brood, I should like to add my 2 cents' worth to the public discussion.

One of the first facts I absorbed as a student at the university on G street when I arrived in 1931 was that instructors who will stand up on their own hind legs and speak the truth as they believe it are woefully few.

It was therefore a distinct pleasure to "discover" on the faculty two or three real human beings who also knew their subjects. One of these was Dr. Herrick, who, because of his progressive ideas, was given the bum's rush by Dr. Marvin, much as Miss Gibbon is getting the works today.

As for Miss Gibbon, I soon found that although I disagreed with many of her ideas, I came out of her classes with the knowledge that my mind had been stimulated, that English courses could be made interesting, alive, vital.

Yes, Mr. Correspondent Patton, Miss Gibbon did "stress her sympathy for the 'Red' government" of Spain. As a believer in democracy, she had no other alternative. History has already shown how democracy took a beating when Spain fell.

The issue in Miss Gibbon's case is not simply a technical matter of Ph. D. degrees. It is the fundamental question of democracy on the campus of an important educational institution.

C. G.
Washington, March 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What has impressed me was one phrase of Miss Gibbon's letter to The Post, issue of March 26. Permit me to quote: "The faculty do not dare to speak out, for their livelihoods and careers are dependent upon Dr. Marvin's favor. It is rather ironic, perhaps, that men and women who teach young people the greatest thoughts of all mankind are incapable themselves of rising above the cowardly concern for self-preservation which their brute instincts alone would provide." True, indeed, as many of us have learned to our sorrow and disgust.

I sympathize with Miss Gibbon, having a pretty clear picture of just what she has experienced, for her case is almost identical with another, with which I am familiar, involving a petty dictatorship. We free-born American citizens do not relish this sort of thing, and if it be true that George Washington University is under a virtual dictatorship, then it behooves every loyal supporter of that great institution to bend their efforts, unitedly, to effect a change in the administration.

Washington, March 26.

[Due to space pressure, correspondence on this subject is now concluded.—Editor's note.]

Dentistry Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Little known and less publicized is the bill HR 7865 now before the Committee for the District of Columbia "for the regulation of the practice of dentistry in the District of Columbia."

I, with the conscientious members of my profession, approve most heartily of any bill that protects the public from unscrupulous practices.

However, I strongly protest that part of Section 12 of this proposed bill which puts into the hands of a minority a power that might be used for personal aversions. I also protest that part of Section 12 which applies to honest advertising. I do not defend advertising: I advocate it. The public has a right to know about dentistry and this bill deprives them of it.

The essence of the bill is not designed in the interest of the public but rather for the interest and benefit of dentists who would not want the public to know the cost of dentistry.

The Gallup Poll published in The Post on June 12, 1938, revealed very glaringly that 42 per cent of the public has hesitated to visit a doctor because of the fear of what the trip may cost.

In my 40 years of dental practice here in the District, I have always lived up to the advertising claims which I made. And I fully realize that advertising dentistry has made the public tooth-conscious and has also benefited the nonadvertising dentists. By advertising prices and guaranteeing work, the advertising dentist is held to a higher degree of efficiency than is the nonadvertising dentist.

The proposed legislation does not do one thing more for the safety and welfare of the public than the present law does. The safety and welfare of the public are more concerned with what the dentist does after he gets the patient in the chair than how he gets him there.

This month marks the hundredth anniversary of dentistry, but it may also mark the start of business restriction through legislation. For the present bill is another wedge in the drive to curb the power and use of advertising in all business.

DR. JOHN K. FREIOT.
Washington, March 27.

Extends Thanks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I ask you very kindly to permit me through your columns to extend the most grateful appreciation of the priests and members of St. Peter's Parish for the most efficient manner in which the Washington Fire Department fought the fire which took place today in our church?

Furthermore, through your kind columns we desire to extend our most grateful appreciation and gratitude to all of the firemen who worked on the blaze. Throughout the time of the fire it was a pleasure to consult with Acting Chief Costello. His solicitude and care, as well as that of the men under his command, were truly admirable.

We feel equal pleasure in extending our grateful thanks also to the members of the Washington Police Department for the thoroughness with which they performed their duties. There was danger always from falling slate from the building, but the sightseers were kept at a safe distance.

May we also add a word of appreciation and thanks to all of the members of the press, friends and parishioners who visited us and extended sympathy with offers to help.

The Post Impressionist

Diary Of A Forty-Niner

Among the lesser-known attractions of the National Capital are its book stores and antique shops. Nowhere else in the United States is there such a wealth of original material available to collectors of Americana. Diaries and letters of prominent Americans, first editions, rare engravings, photographs of historical interest, and old sheet music—these are typical of items that make Washington a mecca for collectors.

An example of what can be found here is the diary of a miner of the California gold rush. Browsing in a Washington bookshop, I found the book, bound in brown leather, pocket-size, in the prospector's own handwriting. These excerpts from it present a vivid picture of life in the gold camps:

(Friday, April 1, 1853)—Commenced work on the claim with Whitney. Dug a sac which equaled one and one-half days' work, and stripped till near sundown, and washed little more than an hour. Got $11.50. The fleas tried to prevent my sleeping, but they did not accomplish it, although they had the assistance of a multitude of rats.

(Wednesday, April 6)—Worked further into the bank and got $42.60. Went to town in the evening and bought the following:

1 qt. milk	$0.25
7½ lbs. potatoes	1.50
2 lbs. onions	.90
1 lb. candles	.60
2 lbs. butter	1.50
1 handkerchief	1.00
6 lbs. sugar	1.00
Paid for washing shirt	.50
Newspaper	.25

(Monday, April 11)—A bull and bear fight came off at Mariposa yesterday. The bear broke his chain and was killed by the spectators with their revolvers. The man who was shot in the ankle last fall on a similar occasion is obliged yet to keep his bed, and subsists on charity. It is quite time such exhibitions were prohibited by law.

(Wednesday, April 13)—A traveling dentist came to us and Chap and I had our teeth filled. He filled three for me for $12.00. Killed the nerve in one and tried to extract the one Dr. Lasseter broke. He did not succeed, but broke it down to the jaw bone and cut the nerve from the roots. I hope I shall not be troubled with it any more.

(Sunday, April 24)—Went to meeting in the evening. McCuistion preached. Mulatto came in playing a violin, followed by a negro. Mc told them to leave and they did. They were immediately arrested and fined $50 and costs $60. After meeting, had a sing.

(Saturday, May 21)—Was awakened by an earthquake shock, but it did no injury. Saw a piece of pure gold weighing 50 ozs. and one dollar. It was found by Mr. Lane near Gold Hill.

(Tuesday, June 14)—Worked as yesterday. The weather was extremely hot, the thermometer indicating 106 degrees in the shade. I was obliged to bathe my head in cold water frequently.

(Friday, June 17)—The same old story today. The weather continued oppressively hot. Got my hair cut and shaved, which cost me $1.50.

(Saturday, June 18)—Hot weather and plenty of work. Mc, having got the saloon papered and fitted up, opened at night and several prominent citizens got gloriously drunk. Got no sleep until 2 o'clock.

(Thursday, June 23)—Worked very hard to get ready for the party which came off in the evening. There were 40 ladies present and it was pronounced the finest party ever had in the county. The supper was furnished by Mr. Phillips for $920. The dancing hall was in the upper story of McNamara's store and was 20 by 60 feet.

(Friday, June 24)—In the morning a difficulty occurred between McCuistion and Jim Smith. After fisticuffing for a little time, they were separated. Smith drew his pistol and cocked it. It was only by great effort by Mc's friends that they were kept apart. There were a great many leaden eyes to be seen and, I judge, aching heads. I worked at the doors hurrying them out.

(Friday, July 1)—The county convention was held here today. "Log rolling" and liquor drinking were the most prominent characteristics.

(Sunday, July 3—Wrote a letter to Louisa and one to Newton. Sent him a lithographic view of scenes in the mines. Also sent Louisa $5.

Agua Fria, July 3, 1853.

My dear Newton:

In five days it will be two years since I saw you. And in five days, too, you will be seven years old. You have grown to be a much larger boy, and think it is a very long time since you saw pa, and wonder why he does not come back and live with you and ma. He stays here only because he can get money a great deal faster than he can there, and will come back when he gets enough to buy a good home where we may all be happy. He works hard every day and saves all he can that he may get back the sooner. Oh, how overjoyed will he be if he shall find his Newton as good a boy as he may be! If he is always good to his ma, kind to everybody, tells no wrong stories, or speaks no bad words, then he will be likely to grow up a good man and gladden the hearts of his parents.

Perhaps you would like to know what kind of a house I live in. Well, it is a pretty good one for this country, and I will mark it out on the other side. It is late and I must bid you goodnight.

Your father, Perrin V. Fox.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

American Epics

TWO OF THE GREAT romances of American life are the old covered-wagon trek to the West, and the birth of a new business. Each of them has been the subject of scores of novels, and many of these are good. The stuff of those stories is what makes American character. And both are epics that can be endlessly rewritten. The covered-wagon trek is the subject of John Weld's "Don't You Cry for Me" (Scribners, $2.75); "Their Own Country" (Bobbs, $2.50) is Alice Tisdale Hobart's romance of business in depression.

Of all the covered-wagon treks, that of the Donner party of 1846 has most drama in it. They tried to take a short cut through the Wasatch Mountains southeast of what is now Salt Lake City, and were delayed for months cutting a new trail through the mountains; they suffered bitterly crossing the unmapped salt desert to the West; they were caught by early snows in the Sierras, and many of the party died. Survival of the remnant was possible only because in the last resort they accepted the horrible inevitable: cannibalism. Hoffman Birney told the story six years ago as the pictorial narrative of a survivor, in "Grim Journey," and a dramatic story it was, carefully tuned to the facts. George R. Stewart told it four years ago, sifting the dubious records and reminiscences as a chapter in American history, in "Ordeal by Hunger," and I prefer his version to all the others. Now, John Weld has used the old story, with considerable embroidery of his own, as the basis for his long pageant-novel, "Don't You Cry for Me."

They start from Independence, now a suburb of Kansas City. Mr. Weld's novel is rich in pictorial detail; it is clear that he has covered most of the route in a modern automobile, and knows the feel of the landscape (though perhaps he missed the old South Pass in Wyoming, now off the paved highway, and thinks of it as more of a "cut" in the mountains than it is).

"The American temperament doesn't believe in leadership, unless it's doing the leading," says Dan Johnson, of Tennessee, when the party refuses to obey its elected leader. That problem of the caravans runs through the story. One group chose the Oregon route; some refused to follow the problematical Hastings cut-off; others shirked in the mountains when the route revealed its almost superhuman difficulties. There were pietists and atheists in the party, fools and timid men, semi-invalids, and high tempers which led to killings, with frontier justice to be meted out. Mr. Weld paints on a large canvas, and for the most part he paints well.

The story acquires a continental perspective by taking 300 pages to reach the Hastings cut-off, where Hoffman Birney began his novel. He hurries through the final tragedy, almost too melodramatic for fictional treatment. I think that he makes too much of the love story of Nell Lansing and Asa Harper; for, against the struggle for very life of a party which, even in the Sierras, counted nearly a hundred souls, the love of one man for another man's wife seems trivial. Yet the book as a whole has a fine sweep to it; this tale of a century-old trek to California is the background to all the Grapes-of-Wrath books being written today.

"MRS HOBART, herself home from China, in "Their Own Country" brings the Chases of her "Oil for the Lamps of China" back to America, too; and some of her pages have a freshness of vision impossible for a writer who has remained in America. Hester Chase's sense of abundance, looking at the piles of oranges on the New York streets; Stephen Chase's understanding of the problem of selling in depression times, based on his memories of selling to the unbelievably poor of China—for such understanding of America, years in Asia were essential preparation. And if Mrs. Hobart is not quite so successful in her pattern of New York life, she is uncommonly acute in her report of the reactions of a Kansas small town to newcomers from New York.

For Stephen Chase, squeezed out of his job in China by civil war, comes home, middle-aged, to hunt a new position in New York and finds the four-square job he is seeking only after he has naturalized himself in Kansas. In New York the welcome of old friends fades when they learn that he is not on leave; the job he lands turns out to have strange strings tied to it. Even Jo Tuttle, a loyal tycoon, is no longer a free man; when Stephen's experiment with a blend of alcohol and gasoline for motorcars arouses the fears of the oil magnates, Tuttle cannot afford to stand by him. Colfax, Kans., is different; there, once their suspicions of New Yorkers are overcome, men still make their own decisions.

Traveler's Return

MR. ROOSEVELT—Well, Sumner, it's good to see you back.

Mr. Welles—Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. Roosevelt—Did you have a pleasant time?

Mr. Welles—Only after I boarded the ship for home.

Mr. Roosevelt—Did you cover all the ground I suggested?

Mr. Welles—I didn't skip a single stop. But you'll have a better idea how much I traveled when you get my expense account.

Mr. Roosevelt—Whatever this trip cost it was worth it.

Mr. Welles—I's nice of you to think so.

Mr. Roosevelt—What was the situation in Italy? Did she favor peace?

Mr. Welles—She liked the general idea but wasn't sure how it would work out in actual practice.

Mr. Roosevelt—Did you see Mussolini?

Mr. Welles—No, he was too busy reviewing his troops.

Mr. Roosevelt—In Germany did Hitler give you a good reception?

Mr. Welles—He listened almost three minutes before starting his rebuttal. That was something!

Mr. Roosevelt—Did he favor peace?

Mr. Welles—He was for peace if he had to fight the rest of his life for it.

Mr. Roosevelt—Did you see Goering?

Mr. Welles—I caught a glimpse of him behind his decorations.

Mr. Roosevelt—What was the situation in France?

Mr. Welles—The French seem to think they'd like peace, but they've never had it long enough to be certain.

Mr. Roosevelt—What cabinet was in power when you were there?

Mr. Welles—Come, come, Franklin; you can't expect me to keep up with everything.

Mr. Roosevelt—How about Chamberlain?

Mr. Welles—He's a different man.

Mr. Roosevelt—Are you sure?

Mr. Welles—Either that or else he's carrying a different umbrella.

Mr. Roosevelt—Do you mean to say you spent all that time in Europe without getting any real encouragement?

Mr. Welles—I rather gathered that they were all too busy with war to consider peace.

Mr. Roosevelt—Did you tell them I wanted peace?

Mr. Welles—I did. They said if they ran across any they'd let you know.

American Airplanes

By Mark Sullivan

The Allies To Get Them

IN WASHINGTON last Wednesday occurred an event which, properly seen, is an outstanding landmark of the war in Europe. It was the decision by our Government to facilitate sales of airplanes to the Allies. This action is comparable in significance to the most important events that have taken place within the theater of the war itself. For the Allies, it is an event favorable in the highest degree.

For the United States, this step is the end of a long road, unnecessarily tortuous. It started in January, 1939—a year and 3 months ago, and 8 months before the war began. It started when a plane, in a test flight in California, coming down by accident, was discovered to have had a French army officer as a passenger. Developments disclosed that the French officer was an inspector and that the French government and also the British had ordered planes from American manufacturers. It was further learned that the orders had been encouraged and facilitated by President Roosevelt.

At once arose commotion, in the press and in Congress. Although no faintest question of neutrality was involved, although there was no war at the time, it was made to appear almost as if Mr. Roosevelt had done something detrimental to America's interest. He felt obliged to defend himself in two press conferences and to a group of Congressmen whom he invited to the White House. What he said to Congressmen in confidence found its way, in possibly inexact form, into the newspapers. That led to a further spasm of commotion.

MR. ROOSEVELT put his justication mainly on the ground that sales of planes abroad by private manufacturers gave employment to American workers; that it gave training to our workers and factories for making planes for our own military equipment, whenever we might need them. There were persons who felt that Mr. Roosevelt's justification was even stronger. This column said, January 27, 1939: "A steady and large supply of airplanes made in our factories and sold to England . . . is, under present conditions, the best preparedness we can practice."

During the 14 months intervening, the sale of planes to the Allies has been beset with suspicion in Congress, impeded by disagreement between Government departments. Finally, this week, we arrived at decision and a clear course. All the Government departments agreed, the Military Affairs Committees of Senate and House agreed. The Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. George C. Marshall, urged it: "I would be deeply disturbed if we didn't do it; I consider it of vital importance for national defense."

From now on we are to let the Allies buy all the airplanes they wish. We go further. In order to give the Allies early deliveries, we will let them have airplanes that were ordered for our own forces. This is upon the sound theory that the making of these planes will lead to improvements in the ones we will get later and that the quantity production thus achieved will give us more planes in shorter time at lower cost.

In brief, the Allies are to have practically unlimited access to all America's plane-making facilities. These facilities are great. They have risen from a total output of 3,643 in 1938, to a present capacity of 1,500 a month. By July 1 our capacity is expected to be 2,000 planes a month; later, 4,000 a month. These planes for the Allies are—so says Secretary of War Woodring—"of types superior to any others in the world." This is in addition to the Allies' own large capacity.

FOR THE ALLIES this should mean superiority in the air, at some reasonably near date. True, Germany can make many planes, and presumably will have Russian resources, and she may buy from Italy. (She has the privilege of buying from any neutral, including ourselves, if she had ships to carry them home.)

How many planes Germany can make or get must be an estimate. And how great a preponderance in number the Allies must have in order to achieve superiority in the air is for experts to say. But it seems clearly probable that the access of the Allies to our factories should give them, in due time, dominance in the air. They already have dominance on the sea. On land, their military strength is or can be made equal to that of Germany.

The other factors of the war—position, timing, opportunity for strategy, the possibility of other countries taking part on either side—all that is for the future to reveal, and for experts to estimate. But it seems tenable to say that the step taken by the United States this week is a major event favoring the Allies. If comes at a time of Allied need. The fall of Finland two weeks ago was a blow to the confidence of the world in Allied victory, a confidence having actual military importance in the case of Balkan nations and other neutrals.

What we did this week illustrates an idea widely held about America's relation to the war. It is that whenever and if the Allies seem in danger of losing, American sentiment would lead us to help them by methods always short of actual participation in the war. What we will never do was put in words by Mr. Roosevelt in his address to Congress last January: "The United States will not become involved in military participation in the war . . . [we] will never again consent to the sending of American youth to fight on the soil of Europe." That is the one thing that seems conclusively and permanently barred by American policy and American opinion."

Underpass Plan Stricken Out As House Passes Supply Bill

ect, and pointed out that the Thomas Circle underpass was authorized in an appropriation bill.

An effort to restore the authorization to the bill in the Senate is expected when Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, starts hearings April 8.

Before the point of order was raised, the House subcommittee had withstood two attempts to amend the measure during the most harmonious House session on a District supply bill in recent years.

Representative Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, moved to strike out a ban against further free admission of nonresident pupils in Washington public schools. His motion was defeated 29 to 8.

An amendment to increase the Metropolitan Police Department force by 25 privates, offered by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, was voted down, 31 to 6.

The District bill occupied only three hours and ten minutes of the House's time. Seventy minutes of two hours of general debate was consumed with extraneous discussion of national taxation, Democratic party pledges, the high price of hay in upstate New York, and the state of the cheese industry in Wisconsin.

Caldwell Praised

Chairman Caldwell, who is retiring from Congress at the close of the current session, was lauded by Republicans and Democrats for his handling of the District supply bill.

Washington is "fast becoming known as the petty crime center of the United States," Shulte told the House in his plea for an increase of $42,500 in the police budget.

He called attention to a purse snatching which occurred near the Capitol yesterday and said that one member had told him "he is afraid to go on the streets at night or to drive his car" because of the wave of holdups.

Schulte, who was robbed of his watch and some money two years ago, told the House:

"It's not a pleasant experience looking into the barrel of a gun."

Police Held Sufficient

Representative O'Neal (Democrat), of Kentucky, a member of the appropriations subcommittee, contested Schulte's amendment and cited figures to show that Washington has more police in proportion to population than 9 out of 12 comparable cities.

Moreover, he pointed out, the Capital has 133 Capitol policemen, 72 U. S. Park police, and a large number of Federal building guards.

"The trouble here," said O'Neal, "is not the number of police but in getting the police to do the job properly."

Schulte and Caldwell called attention to the assignment of Metropolitan police to inspection duties that could be performed by civilian employes and suggested that this practice be stopped.

Majority Leader Rayburn joined the discussion to deplore the type of men chosen for the Capitol police force. Citing the dangers that are raised by reason of the war, Rayburn said that Capitol police should be selected as are other policemen.

Capitol police, who have been ridiculed in the past by their own chief, are patronage employes, many of whom take the jobs while attending school in the District.

School Reciprocity Asked

Sasscer argued for elimination of the ban against further free admission of nonresident pupils in Washington schools on the ground that District pupils are admitted to Maryland schools and to the University of Maryland.

The District and Maryland, he said, have been operating on a "reciprocal" basis.

Caldwell, in reply, pointed out that nonresident pupils in Washington schools number between 2,600 and 2,700 and cost taxpayers $265,000 a year. He cited testimony of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, that a District resident had been charged tuition to enroll in a Virginia school.

The general debate was opened with an explanation of the bill by Caldwell, who emphasized that the subcommittee had made personal inspections of welfare institutions.

He expressed the opinion that the institutions are "not nearly so bad as they've been painted" and that any fault has been in inefficient administration.

During his talk O'Neal interrupted to praise the chairman for his "intelligence and conscientiousness" in handling the District bill. The people of the District, as well as Congress, should be grateful for his service, O'Neal said.

Representative Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska, also a member of the subcommittee, followed with a tribute to Caldwell.

When Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, asked whether the committee "was influenced by press references to certain items," Stefan said the committee had welcomed the information furnished by the newspapers.

"It's the only way the people of the District have to express their views to Congress," he said. "The newspapers are performing a great service."

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, interrupted to call attention to the welfare inquiry conducted by Representative D'Alesandro, jr. (Democrat), of Maryland, and Stefan agreed that the public health subcommittee had done a valuable service in calling attention to conditions in the welfare institutions.

Appreciation of Auditor Daniel J. Donovan was voiced by Representative Louis C. Rabaut (Democrat), of Michigan, a member of the subcommittee.

"Yes," said Stefan, "he knows more about Washington affairs than anyone else in the District."

After Representative Treadway had consumed 25 minutes in a talk on a proposal to revamp the national tax system, Representative Compton I. White (Democrat), of Idaho, took the floor to criticize the placement of Federal buildings remote from the Capitol and in what he called "swamps."

The Capital Of Credit Agencies

The Necessity Of Adequate Capital Structures

In a previous article Dr. Youngman discussed the potential threat to the solvency of the Federal Land Banks resulting from the President's proposal to recapture funds of Federal lending agencies. The present article is concerned with the adequacy of the capital structure of the other agencies operating under the Farm Credit Administration. It attempts to show why advocates of a soundly administered, non-political farm credit system attach such great importance to the possession of a substantial capital backing.

By Anna P. Youngman.

THE FEDERAL FARM MORTGAGE Corporation is avowedly an emergency financing agency organized to take care of the long-term capital needs of farmers unable to qualify for Land Bank loans. It lends on the security of first and second mortgages on real or personal farm property at not to exceed 75 per cent of the appraised value of such property. A majority of these Commissioner loans are secured by second mortgages subordinate to those held by the Federal Land Banks.

Credit has been extended to farmers on loans that would not be regarded by the Land Banks as conforming to the sound business principles under which they are expected to operate. Not only has the Farm Mortgage Corporation financed farmers through Commissioner loans but approximately half its bonds, guaranteed by the Government as to principal and interest, were issued to assist the Land Banks in their financing operations at a time when the unguaranteed issues of the latter could not be sold in the open market. In exchange it has acquired a large volume amount of Land Bank bonds held by the corporation as part security for its own outstanding bonds, totalling $1,279,000,000 on December 31, 1939.

Because of the extra-hazardous character of its operations, the $200,000,000 of capital stock of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, which is entirely owned by the Government, is regarded as a necessary protection against possible heavy losses. The corporation's stock and reserve for losses was about 17 per cent of the value of the outstanding bonds at the end of last December.

IT MAY BE argued that the Federal Land Banks have only succeeded in maintaining their record for conservatism in lending by shifting to this emergency lending agency the especially hazardous loans. That is true and it is also true that the Government guarantees of the issues of the Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds provided the funds with which the Land Banks carried on during the early period of emergency. Nevertheless, by keeping the two agencies separate it has been possible to attract investment support for the Land Banks without the aid of Government guarantees.

If in course of time the Government can retire as owner of Land Bank stocks, leaving both ownership and management to farmer borrowers under a limited amount of supervision, it will be possible to establish a self-sustaining system of agricultural credit, not dependent upon the Government for suport or guarantees.

That is the hope of those who have been working to strengthen the system and what they fear is that their labors will be lost effort if a decision should be reached to merge the two types of operations. That their apprehension is justified is shown by the introduction by Chairman Jones of the House Committee on Agriculture of a bill which would reduce interest rates on both Federal Land Bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans to 3 per cent, provide government guarantees for all farm loan bonds and retire the capital stock of the Land Banks and the national farm loan associations. Testifying this week before the committee, Secretary Wallace enthusiastically endorsed the major features of this bill.

It is a significant fact that the only agricultural credit agencies reporting earned surpluses instead of accumulated deficits at the end of the fiscal year 1939 were those operating under the FCA without government guarantees of their outstanding bonds or debentures. They are the Federal Land Banks, the Intermediate Credit Banks, and the Banks for Cooperatives.

The production credit corporations likewise have no deficits, but their function is not that of direct lending agencies. They furnish capital for the local production credit associations which consist of farmer borrowers seeking short-term loans. As in case of the national farm loan associations, the farmers invest in stock to 5 per cent of the loans obtained from their associations. The rest of the capital, over 80 per cent, in fact, consists of funds furnished by the production credit corporations whose stock to the amount of $120,000,000 is owned entirely by the Government. The corporations act only in supervisory capacity.

Obviously, to withdraw the capital invested in the local associations would hamper seriously the operations of these organizations if it did not completely destroy their usefulness. However, the production credit corporations possess about $40,000,000 of capital invested in Government bonds and approved securities, the income from which is used exclusively to pay operating expenses and build up required reserves. This sum might be recaptured without hampering their operations, provided of course that Congress appropriated funds to pay current operating expenses.

The budgetary burden would not be lightened by such a procedure which would have the further disadvantage of making the organization dependent upon the will of Congress. But it would reduce the volume of outstanding Government debt which is uncomfortably close to the statutory debt limit.

THE FEDERAL Intermediate Credit Banks with a capital stock of $70,000,000 and a surplus of $30,000,000 owned entirely by the Government, supply funds for the production credit associations which discount their paper with them. Indeed, the paper of the associations supplies a large part of the security behind the unguaranteed debentures which the intermediate credit banks sell in the open market. Thus it is considered highly important that the loans of the associations shall be soundly based and that capital be ample to provide protection against losses.

The Intermediate Credit Banks are at present amply supplied with funds. With about 75 per cent of their capital and paid-in surplus invested in Government securities and with cash on hand amounting to nearly 9 per cent of capital and surplus they could return part of their capital to the Government without jeopardizing the investment value of their unsecured debentures. However, it is the possession of this large volume of Government security holdings that has made it possible for the banks to sell debentures in the open market on an extraordinarily low yield basis. Moreover, as the operations of the banks increase, more capital will be needed to provide insurance against losses.

The Banks for Cooperatives could undoubtedly retire a very considerable percentage of their capital stock without hampering their operations, for their capital stock exceeded $152,000,000 at the end of 1939, and they had an earned surplus of $13,700,000. Their loans at the time amounted to less than 50 per cent of capital while their holdings of Government guaranteed obligations totaled $88,000,000.

In contrast to the surpluses reported by the Federal Land Banks, the Intermediate Credit Banks, and the Banks for Cooperatives the unincorporated lending agencies within the Department of Agriculture, namely, the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan section and the Farm Security Administration, have heavy accumulated deficits to show. Of course it is not fair to draw comparisons between credit agencies trying to operate on a sound business basis and those in which lending and relief operations are mingled. However, it is pertinent to ask what is likely to happen to the sound, business-like credit organizations of the FCA if they should become "integrated with" the hybrid credit-relief agencies of the Department of Agriculture.

The Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section of the Department of Agriculture, like the FSA, is unincorporated, operates with appropriations made directly by Congress and returns to the Treasury all interest on loans. Up to the end of last June it reported total outlays at $192,000,000, revenues of $58,000,000 and losses of $134,000,000.

The Commodity Credit Corporation, which lends money to farmers to stabilize prices against the security of stored cotton and other crops, was also shifted to the Department of Agriculture under the reorganization order. It is incorporated and has a capital stock. But the capital has twice been wiped out and replaced by a direct appropriation from the Treasury to the amount of $210,000,000. Its net worth last June was placed at just $13,000,000. These figures are, however, quite unreliable in view of the uncertain value of the holdings of stored agricultural surpluses pledged against loans.

So far as the agricultural credit agencies are concerned, one is forced to conclude that if there is to be any recapture of capital it will have to come from FCA agencies.

IF CONGRESS intends to impose conditions upon the utilization of funds that prevent lending agencies from following sound policies, it does not particularly matter whether they maintain a semblance of independence or become the subordinate parts of a Government department. In any case, if forced to incur risks that entail heavy losses, they will become dependent upon Congressional appropriations or be forced to rely upon Government guarantees of their issues to attract private investment support.

And if you didn't catch the name, it's because the introduction was made by a "lip-lazy" individual who never heard of the word "articulate," says Mrs. Elinor Cox Karsten (above), director of speech at Sidwell's Friends School. Mrs. Karsten, attending sessions of the Eastern Public Speaking Conference at the Mayflower Hotel, yesterday demonstrated proper lip movement in the pronunciation of words, contending that too many talkers—public or drawing room—fail to impress their listeners because of slovenly speech manners. "If anything is worth saying, it's worth saying so it can be understood," said Mrs. Karsten. "If a lot of people who are otherwise intelligent could hear themselves talk, they would be bored in a very few minutes." It takes very little effort, says Mrs. Karsten, to speak correctly. For instance, she pointed out, the lips should form a perfect circle for the word "oh;" should be spread in a small grin for the letter "E;" should be puffed out for the sound "sh" and the tongue should press against the front teeth when saying "the"

Perfectly Proportioned Faces Rare Even in Films, But Illusion May Be Created by Means of Make-up

A pencil, a mirror and a smile determined that Geraldine Fitzgerald (below) and Gale Page (right) had perfectly proportioned faces. Test your face by the same method. Face mirror and smile broadly. Place pencil directly over center pupil of eye, as at right. Corner of mouth should be precisely under center pupil of eye. Eyebrows should begin over center of eye. If these two features are in line, you pass the test

Every Woman Should Analyze Her Features, Then Work Out System for Playing Up Her Good Points and Minimizing Her Weak Ones

By Carolyn Abbott

A PERFECT face is rare. Even among the screen beauties only 10 per cent have perfectly proportioned features. Geraldine Fitzgerald and Gale Page are two of that small number. Yet, with corrective make-up, many stars create the illusion of an oval face, which is considered the most perfectly shaped countenance.

Distinctive facial beauty depends upon balance, symmetry of line and proportion. While proportion is greatly to be desired, it isn't necessary, for make-up tricks can go a long way toward creating the impression of harmony. But a woman must know her own assets and defects in order to correct the defect.

In analyzing features, you must look for such characteristic irregularities as a long nose, small eyes, broad cheek bones and a small mouth. If you want to diminish the bad points and accent the best, then be truthful about your features. Don't fool yourself by thinking you have large, expressive eyes if they are really small, or that you have a well-proportioned mouth when it is tiny and drooping.

In Hollywood the players are given the test of the "photograph and the rule of three" to determine the proportion of their faces. Anyone can take the test at home. The implements are a photograph in which the subject is looking straight into the camera, a ruler and a pencil. Here's how:

Lightly draw three lines straight across the photograph, one at the hairline, one through the center of the pupils of the eyes and one through the center of the lips.

Distances Should Be Equal

The distance between lips and eyes should be equal to the distance between eyes and hairline. Conforming to these measurements so far as proportion goes, a face is perfect. This is the test that Geraldine Fitzgerald passed with flynig colors. Since there were no imperfections shown in Miss Fitzgerald's examination, she is allowed a perfectly natural eyebrow line. Her mouth is arched very slightly and her favorite hair-do, both on and off the screen, is a long bob, sleek over the crown and curled luxuriantly at the ends.

Perc Westmore, Warner Bros. make-up chief, applies a different test to determine the balance of Gale Page's features. Passing his method on to others, he main tains that it is equally as applicable to the stenographer, socialite and actress. So try it this way. Face your mirror and smile broadly. The corners of your mouth should be directly beneath the centers of the pupils of your eyes. If the corners don't quite reach the extended line, apply lip rouge generously to create the illusion of width. When the mouth is too wide (still using the corner-under-pupil method), make your lips full in the center and taper to no rouge at all before reaching the corner. However, don't make your mouth too thin or too cupid-bowed in altering it.

If your mouth is too full, emphasize the inner edges. Move your foundation cream very slightly over the outer edge of the lips. Do not use too brilliant a lip color or apply your rouge too heavily or too near the mouth.

If your mouth is prim and unexpressive, try chewing gum (in private) and facial exercises to give it movement and expression. Many actresses do this. Learn to keep the corners of your mouth turned up, ever so slightly at the ends. A little trick like this can transform your entire face, and in time, oddly enough, change your entire appearance and personality.

Brows Begin at Eye Corner

Continuing the above method, measure the eyebrow distance. An eyebrow should begin directly over the corner of the eye. Under no circumstances should it end in a drooping line. That is also true of the other curved lines of your face, eyelashes and mouth. Droopy brows tend to give you a tragic, unhappy expression. Again, the brow should not end bluntly. An upward curve creates the illusion of perfect harmony.

Brows that are flat across the top give a masculine appearance; a winged line, like a dangling participle, gives the appearance of unfinished business. If the eyebrow is arched too high in the center the eyes appear smaller, and if the line slants strongly upward from the corners of the eyes, this calls attention to the nose and increases its apparent size. An eyebrow arched abruptly at the beginning and slanted off toward the temple makes the eyes seem sad and questioning. Correct shaping (other features being in proportion) calls for a line that follows the natural curve of your eye. Any variation from this dictum is dangerous, according to Westmore's theory.

"Most of the talk about remaking faces is bunk," said Westmore. "Only two features of the human visage can be changed at will (and without plastic surgery)—the mouth and eyebrows. Remember these are the only movable features. However, much can be done with creams, rouge and powder, as well as with lipstick and eye make-up, provided it is applied to accentuate outstandingly good features and to play down bad ones."

The art of applying make-up is more than a mere process of daubing on cosmetics on spots that would seem to do the most good. Basically, it should concern a proper balance of your features.

A physical defect has been the plague of my life and has made me so self-conscious that I hate to meet new people.

My problems are these: (1) I simply cannot express myself in words, either written or oral; (2) I'm always saying the wrong thing; and (3) I'm too critical of others. I have never had many friends and I'm not adding any new ones. My mother "harps" on this and also upon my bad disposition. There's never a day that she doesn't bring up these failings of mine. But so far as I can see, she has no friends either.

My lack of ability to express my thoughts is my major problem. The others stem from this. I can't think of a thing to say to people when I meet them. My voice cracks and my hands drip perspiration. Whatever I manage to say is construed as being offensively intended. Please believe me, Miss Haworth, when I say that I do not mean to make cutting remarks.

Yet this is what happens: weeks later, someone will drag up something I have said, and the interpretation they put on it isn't the thought I was trying to convey at all. It would be foolish to say that one is misunderstood by everybody and I am aware that the trouble is within myself. I honestly want to correct my faults. Can you tell me how? Sincerely, ROSITA.

Poise Derives From "Conviction of Loveliness"

DEAR ROSITA: An American actress internationally known for her subtle fascination has been quoted as saying, "Beauty begins with an inner conviction of loveliness,"—and because this is her philosophy, she makes of her toilette an elaborate ritual. Her dressing table is adorned with the most exquisite accessories; her perfumes, cosmetics, creams, lotions, etc., are carefully chosen and skillfully employed to intensify her "inner conviction of loveliness." She believes in the psychological stimulus, to the feminine personality, of everything that contributes to one's own serene knowledge that one's person is as pleasing as intelligent cultivation and adornment can make it.

In other words, this woman believes in a "build-up" to poise. And she achieves that "build-up" in her own fashion. That she does it successfully is proven by the fact that she is warmly loved and enormously popular; flattered and sought-after; and lovely with a haunting sort of loveliness that is both remote and magnetic. Which brings me to the point concerning your problem.

I believe that you are suffering not from any lack of essential qualities which make for fully satisfying social acceptance; but from your mother's woefully misguided, unconsciously cruel, continuous destructive criticism. When she should be building you up, because of your singular sensitivity, she is tearing you down by the very hysterical excess of her desire to see you "go over," socially.

Judging from your letter, there is no foundation in fact for your supposition that you "simply cannot express yourself in words, either written or oral." On the contrary, you express yourself in writing rather better than the average. You go straight to the point and, more importantly, there is nothing objectionable—in the direction of under-evaluation or over-evaluation—in your self-appraisal.

Your speech-handicap, when meeting persons socially, is directly due, I should say, to your uneasy self-consciousness at the moment of speaking. And that self-distrust stems from the fact that there is no one, among your closest associates, who pays you what someone has called "a psychic income" of cordial and sincere encouragement. In order to have poise, one must know—must have concrete evidence, supplied by the affectional response of at least a few—that one has lovable qualities of character, special abilities of mind, pleasing attributes of personality, appearance and so on.

When this kind of encouragement (this psychic nurture) is denied a child by his parents, and particularly when they make him the butt of habitual disparagement, he meets society (in both the limited and larger meanings of the word) at a painful disadvantage. He is wretchedly on the defensive; and we are told that the person who is prepared for combat automatically and unconsciously invokes it. Your relationship with your mother—your closest associate—is one of conflict; one of sharp accusation and smarting retort; and it is almost inevitable that your habitual manner of speaking and reacting to her would carry over into your other relationships.

In my opinion, it will be exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, for you to acquire poise, serenity, an inner conviction of loveliness or the techniques of social adequacy, so long as you continue living with your mother. In cases of this kind, it is nearly always necessary for the harassed and frustrated younger personality to get away from home in order to "find himself," as the saying goes.

If it can be arranged, I think you should take up residence in another city, in circumstances which would provide both economic and social independence of your mother. Once entirely on your own, I am sure that you can work out, in time, a reasonably satisfactory social adjustment to persons of kindred mind. But if you must remain here, then I recommend a series of conferences with a psychologist, as the best means of developing (a) the self-understanding and (b) the mature understanding of your mother's erroneous attitude, that will enable you to normalize your general social behavior. M. H.

Plan Spring Wedding Now

WILL you have a stately church wedding—or a quiet little affair in chapel or home? Whichever you choose, you want it to be a lovely memory—and it will be if you know correct dress, etiquette.

At a formal wedding, you wear the traditional bridal gown and veil, carry a bouquet or prayer-book. If the ceremony is in the afternoon, the groom wears a cutaway, striped trousers—in the evening, tails, white tie.

For an informal wedding, the bride may wear a suit, a gay wisp of a hat and a corsage. The groom wears a dark business suit, a boutonniere.

Reducing Baths Save Expense On New Clothes

Cabinet Steaming And Then Massage Recommended

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

IF YOU are experiencing that depressing discovery that none of last spring's clothes fit properly, don't blame it on changing styles but on yourself. And don't be tempted to auction your salary for the next few months to assemble an entire new wardrobe just because your hips aren't as lithe as they used to be. The practical move would be to trim down hips and waists first, then trim up last spring's clothes with fresh collars belts and other economical trivia.

Since most of us are both impractical and lazy in the spring, we need a push to get us back into perfectly fitting clothes. An effective means to this end is the vapor or steam cabinet and brisk massage routine. Two or three of these routines followed for a couple of weeks will tone up both skin and system circulation and get winter-sloppy figures back into form.

Such a spring tonic workout at a local therapeutic headquarters is kind on slim budgets. A doctor checks up each patient for blood pressure before prescribing baths and massages. He is assisted by his wife, a nure, and masseuse. These baths were installed recently in new headquarters with streamlined cabinet and colonic equipment.

This spring tonic is far easier to take than sulphur and molasses for it consists only of a sulphur-vapor bath, a massage, and possibly daily exercises followed by that most successful of all exercises, pushing oneself away from the table before dessert.

The sulphur bath is taken in an antiseptic cabinet, the patient relaxed in a reclining position. The pores are opened and the pent-up poisons and acids escape. Skin irritations and acne as well as the general complexion are helped. Circulation is stimulated by a body massage that follows. The massage is followed by a toning up with electric rollers which help smooth out hip bulges, shoulder kinks, and "spare tires."

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 29.

BRILLIANT memories of five beautiful sisters have come alive here in the last few days—the five lovely and romantic De Acosta sisters who captured the imaginations of New Yorkers as no debutantes have done since. They were dark and beautiful creatures of a Spanish line, and queened it over the city of their day, and it wasn't long ago.

ALICE HUGHES

Aida and Maria and Angelica, all married, are seldom in the social scene any more. The most beautiful and most noted of the five was Rita, who married a Lydig, and after her divorce turned to the consolations of religion. Then came her ill-fated love for the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of a Fifth avenue church. His bishop forbade their marriage, because of her divorce, and not many years later both died—tragic figures.

The other sister, Mercedes, has spent most of her recent years in California, but she came back to town not long ago—black - haired, bright-eyed, an authentic De Acosta of the days when they were the real glamour belles of the town, though that pestiferous term had not then been done to death, or even coined.

Mercedes' possession was the magnificent wardrobe of Rita, in her golden days, and she was persuaded to put it on display at our Museum of Costume design. I wish that you all could see the glorious laces, the mantillas, the gowns that once bedecked the person of the foremost debutante of her day. They are breath-taking.

Soon even these trinkets will be dust with Rita De Acosta Lydig, one of the great beauties of her day. And that was really only yesterday.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Two rages which have held out among the girls here are listening to records of these Calypso singers of Trinidad (which is a restful sport) and bowling, which certainly isn't. All sorts of our young ladies have gone madly in for wafting the big ball down the wooden lane—debs from the Stork Club, ushers from the theaters, waitresses from the beaneries of Times Square. And there couldn't be better exercise for the figure, I suppose, but it is plenty strenuous.

Right Health Habits Will Cure Acne

Diet, Exercise And Skin Cleanliness Are Three Main Factors

By Ida Jean Kain

ANYONE who has ever suffered from acne knows that the trouble is deeper than skin deep. It's most damaging potentiality is to leave the boy or girl who suffers from it with an abiding inferiority complex.

But acne can be cleared up—not overnight but over a period of weeks. The cure is affected through a revision of health habits. We have it on the authority of a noted New York dermatologist that acne is not a skin infection but a functional disturbance, and that the main factors involved in its correction are diet, exercise and skin cleanliness.

Chocolate Is Taboo

As this specialist points out, it is generally understood that acne is caused by an interference with the normal secretion of oil from the oil glands. The general health, however, is the chief concern in its treatment.

Diet is extremely important. And at an age when a chocolate soda is the motivation for those meetings at the corner drugstore, chocolate is the one food which is taboo in all acne cases. Chocolate and cocoa in any form must be avoided by the acne sufferer.

We are told that ham, pork and sausage must be deleted from the menu and that even such fats as cheese, cream and butter may need to be restricted. It may be advisable to omit all greasy foods, rich foods, and those which are difficult to digest, such as boiled onions and cooked cabbage. Sometimes tea and coffee must be given up.

Takes 24 Hours for Reaction

Our doctor suggests that a list be made of all the suspected foods and that the entire list be left out of the menus. This list should include any food which you may imagine to have a bad reaction on the skin. Then, one by one, the suspects may be returned to the diet until it is definitely established which ones contribute to the trouble. It takes about 24 hours to get a food reaction. When you find out which foods are to blame, they must be given up entirely.

Growing boys and girls need good diets, high in all the foods essential to health: milk, eggs, fruits, vegetables, whole wheat bread, cereals. The energy foods, which also are needed, may comprise potatoes, rice, macaroni and easily dirgested desserts—except those containing chocolate. The doctor advises the daily use of some form of cod liver oil for vitamin A, the vitamin which promotes a healthy skin condition.

Outdoor exercise is considered imperative. If you have this skin trouble, get as much outdoor activity as possible. Join a hiking club, take up badminton, tennis, roller skating, or buy or borrow a bike. Spend as many hours as you can manage out of doors.

Since acne often begins with the scalp, special attention should be given to scalp cleanliness. Your own determatologist may suggest a corrective scalp lotion or ointment. Brushing the hair is very important.

Senora de Boyd Holds Her First Large Reception at Embassy

Panama Envoy's Triplet Daughters, Aflutter Over Prospects of a Movie Career, Are Center of Much Confused Attention

By Carolyn Bell.

Bubbling over with the prospect of a Hollywood contract the Boyd triplets, daughters of the Ambassador from Panama and Senora de Boyd, received yesterday with their mother and older sister at the first large party they have given since the envoy assumed duties here.

Wearing identically designed dresses, but in various shades, the senoritas greeted one and all with a warm handshake. Senora de Boyd, chic in black with a cluster of bright-red carnations, introduced the guests to her four bonnie daughters. Senorita Lola Boyd wore a gown, tea length, in ashes of roses crepe. After much difficulty guests were able to distinguish one Boyd triplet from another. Their gowns were floor length crepe made with tucked bodices, short sleeves and straight skirts. Edith wore a heavenly shade of blue while Mildred had selected turquoise and Elena pale pink.

The triplets find the mailbox a tantalizing object these days for they are impatiently awaiting a letter from the gentleman who caused all this Hollywood furor in the first place. An agent recently wrote the girls—who have been angling for a movie contract for some time now—that he "thought he had something" with a major studio. He instructed them to send their most recent photographs by return air mail. Needless to say the dancing, singing trio did. So now it's up to the mailman!

Feminine Guests In the Majority

It was strictly a feminine party yesterday—with one or two exceptions—but the Ambassador was on hand to chat with first one guest and then another. An early arrival was Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Jean Wallace. A cluster of baby orchids were pinned to Mrs. Wallace's ensemble and Jean topped off her blue reefer coat with a black straw hat.

The large tea table was centered with a cluster of red roses, white iris and white roses in a tall vase rising out of a compotier filled with grapes and other fruits. At one end Mrs. Woodrow Wilson poured from a magnificent silver tea service. Mrs. Wilson looked charming in her blue ensemble topped by a flower hat fashioned entirely of bright blue bachelor's button. Over her print dress she wore a wool coat of blue lined in the print. At the other end of the table Mme. Ertegun and Senora de Recinos poured an excellent punch jointly from a large silver bowl. Mme. Recinos, whose black ensemble was topped by a gray feather hat, handled the ladle while Senora de Recinos held the glasses. Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister from Guatemala, reported that her husband will leave next week for Guatemala—and when he returns the middle of May will bring their daughter, Laura, back with him.

Others who had been asked to pour were Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Ambassador of Ecuador; Senora de Gauchalla, wife of the Minister of Bolivia; Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wearing a smart rust suit; Mrs. Lawrence Duggan and Mrs. James Helm. A cunning pink straw sailor was perched atop Mme. Espil's curls. Partaking of some of the excellent food, which included shrimp stuck in red cabbage, chicken salad stuffed in rolls and variety of other foods, was Mrs. James H. Hughes, wife of Senator Hughes, of Delaware.

Senora de Fuentes In Pink Hat

Wearing a stunning pink felt hat, coachman style, was Senora de Fuentes. Senora de Recinos was accompanied by her extremely pretty daughter, Matilde. Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, was there, as were Senora de Escalante, wife of the Venezuelan Ambassador, accompanied by their daughter, Maria Teresa; Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal; Senora de Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador; Mme. Rajamaitri, wife of the Minister of Thailand, wearing an exquisite black frock relieved only by a star sapphire clip and diamond earrings; Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Bolivia; Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czech Minister, wearing a cluster of yellow African daisies pinned to her black gown; Mrs. Preston MacGoodwin, Mrs. Walter Wyatt and Mrs. Thomas Dawson, accompanied by her attractive daughter, Lolita, who was wearing a smart black and white outfit.

Still others attending the party were Senora de Caceras, wife of the Minister of Honduras; Mme. Lescot, wife of the Minister of Haiti; Miss Martha Watts, Mrs. Francis Brown Cabell Brown, Senora de Bricenco, wife of the Counselor of the Panamanian Embassy, who was assisting; Mrs. George S. Holmes, Mme. Ricardo Alfaro and her daughter, Yolande, and Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose.

Party Honors Mmes. Buck And Grady

Mrs. Frank H. Buck, wife of the Representative from California, and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, were ranking guests at a small luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown at Pierre's.

White tulips centered the table, at which covers were laid for eight. In keeping with her custom, the hostess disregarded protocol in seating her guests; gave them numbers as they arrived and had them match numbers on their place cards.

Mrs. Brown was smartly turned out in a dark blue frock, worn with a matching halo hat, accented with a red scarf. Mrs. Buck wore a beige ensemble and a sable neckpiece, and Mrs. Grady's burgundy suit was topped with a tricky blue straw hat, trimmed in white.

An unexpected part of the program was the drawing of numbers from a hat, the lucky person receiving a hand-made doll, designed by Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor, who was among the guests. Others there included Mrs. David Edward Barbey, Mrs. James Craig Peacock and Mrs. Walter Wyatt.

Mrs. Moorhead Host to Debs

Two of the season's debutantes—the Misses Jean Wallace, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, and Peggy Houghteling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, were guests of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Howell Moorhead. The party, which took place at the Carlton, included several other debutantes and their mothers.

Present were Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. Royal McKenna, Mrs. George Maurice Norris, Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, Miss Elizabeth Fish, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Joan McKenna, Miss Patricia Morris and Miss Joanna Huntington.

Grand Duchy of Luxembourg To Reestablish Legation Here

Increase in Commerce With United States Leads Principality to Decision; Hugues Le Gallais to Be Charge de Affairs

After almost a decade, a legation of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg is to be reestablished in Washington. Hugues Le Gallais, who landed in New York on Thursday on the Conte de Savoia, will come to Washington shortly to serve as Charge d'Affaires.

The last Minister from the little duchy, which has a standing army of 260, was Ramon de Waja. The last legation was closed when the principality decided that commerce with America wasn't enough to justify maintaining one.

Luxembourg made the local headlines late last summer, when Prince Consort Felix and his 19-year-old son, Prince John, made a trip to this country. They stayed overnight at the White House and then went to New York for the World's Fair. The pair had planned a tour through the United States and into Canada, but after the outbreak of war, returned to Europe sooner than they intended.

The tiny duchy, which is ruled by Grand Duchess Charlotte, was formerly a part of the duchy of Burgundy and was owned by Emperor Charles V. The country has a parliament of 48 members. The ruling family have been heads of the country since 1865.

Luxembourg has consulates in many large cities here, and in Washington it has been represented by Consul Cornelius Jacoby.

On his arrival from New York, M. Le Gallais said that the war in Europe has not caused resumption of representation here, but that the friendly relations and "increasing commerce" had warranted it. He is accompanied by his wife.

Paul Siftons Fete Author, Cast of Play

'Heavenly Express' Performers Guests Of Honor at Tea

The author and most of the cast of the play, "Heavenly Express," gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sifton yesterday for a tea in their honor.

Absent was John Garfield, the star, who is suffering from a cold, but the guests could gape at Miss Aline MacMahon, Harry Carey, Mrs. Carey, Art Smith and Albert Bein, the playwright.

Many of the actors used to be associated with the Group Theater in New York, which produced Mr. Sifton's play, "1931," several years ago. Mr. Bein, the author of "Let Freedom Ring," also wrote "Little Ol' Boy," a play set in a reformatory which was responsible for the rise to fame of Burgess Meredith. The Siftons and Mr. Bein have been friends for a long time.

The hostess gathered in several writers yesterday for tea. Among them were Mrs. Justin Miller, author of "First the Blade" under her professional name, May Merrill Miller, and now completing her second novel; Mrs. Henry Edgerton, and several others.

Walter Gellhorn, also present yesterday, is the brother of Martha Gellhorn, whose latest book, "A Stricken Field," is just out. She is noted as an attractive and adventuresome blonde and, it is said, is the inspiration for the heroine of the Hemingway play, "The Fifth Column." Mr. and Mrs. Gellhorn came to Washington this year.

The other guests included Miss Kathryn Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Lewis; Representative and Mrs. Charles H. Leavy, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Altmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Latimer and several others.

Mrs. Cordell Hull Returns to Capital From Florida Trip

William, who has been on his spring vacation, will return to Yale shortly. Mrs. Jackson, who with her daughter Mary, joined the Attorney General in Miami after several days, is expected to return to Washington some time today. She will be accompanied by Mary, who will return to Smith College the middle of next week.

Tourists to View John Hunter House

Dr. and Mrs. Laurance Thompson will open the famous John Hunter house in Alexandria for the tour to be held there April 13 under the auspices of the Alexandria Association. Thirteen private houses and gardens, and a tavern courtyard are among the historic places to be shown.

John Hunter was a Scot who came to this country 157 years ago and established a shipyard. For 37 years he turned out the finest of vessels, and in turn was succeeded by his son and grandson. He built a clapboard house for himself high on a hill, the mansion which is now occupied by Dr. and Mrs. Thompson.

Dr. Thompson, incidentally, is a direct descendant of the famous captain of Revolutionary fame on whose farm at Mendham, N. J., starving and exhausted Continentals could always be sure of a hearty meal. Family tradition has it that the ladies of the family kept a kettle of soup constantly boiling to hearten the weary soldiers.

Capper Likens Voteless District to Dictatorship At National Legislative Council's Luncheon

Senator Declares 'Political Cancer' Must Be Removed

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The voteless plight of the District of Columbia was characterized by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, yesterday as "a dangerous political cancer" that should be removed" from the heart of the body politic."

Addressing the luncheon of the National Legislative Council on State Government, held at the Willard Hotel, he appealed to Council members to "work with all your might to free these half-million splendid people from the bonds which deprive them of their just rights as citizens."

Senator Capper, reiterating arguments he presented before the District Federation of Women's Clubs in an address in the early winter, said it was inconsistent to hurl "denuciations and epithets at dictatorships and totalitarian states in other parts of the world when an almost perfect example of such irresponsible forms of government is maintained by our national Government in our own national Capital."

He laid responsibility for this injustice to residents of the District at the door of their fellow Americans in the States who failed to urge remedial action. He had a sympathetic audience, as support for District suffrage amendment is on the program of the National Legislative Council whose delegates work through their State groups.

Replogle, president of the national council

Studebaker Sees Need of Centralization

Other luncheon speakers directed attention to special needs in other fields covered by the council's program.

Dr. John Studebaker, commissioner of education, although professing to be fundamentally a decentralist, said the educational system could be improved in the various States if it were more centralized within the State. Citing his own State, Iowa, he said there are more school officers than there are school employes. Of the 23,000 high schools in the country, 7,000 are two-teacher schools, many of which should be consolidated, he asserted. If the State governments assumed a fair share of financial responsibility for public education as well as authority for it, the situation would be much improved, he added. He also urged study in the field of adult education.

Arthur Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, suggested that the council members compare the provisions and administration of unemployment compensation in their States with those of the workmen's compensation laws, and that they also see what proportion of the workers have their benefit rights exhausted before they return to work and what the minimum benefit is. Public assistance was another field of study he suggested—to see whether it was being administered equitably and whether aid for dependent children is as adequate as that for the aged.

Miss Anderson Sounds Warning

Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Woman's Bureau, discussed labor legislation affecting women. She asserted that any legislation benefiting women also was a benefit to men workers, but warned that measures amended to include men should be watched to be sure they did not, at the same time, deprive women of some of the rights they had gained.

She also commended the work of the Minimum Wage Commission of the District, of which Mrs. William Kittle, who presided at the luncheon, is chairman.

The council reelected Mrs. Arnold M. Replogle, of Pittsburgh, as president, at the closing business session in the afternoon.

Other officers are: Mrs. Paul E. Madden, of Chicago, first vice president; Miss Ruth N. Wood, of St. Louis, succeeding Mrs. Nannie R. Nash, of Birmingham, Ala., as second vice president; Miss Berenice Tuttle, of Vermont, third vice president, a newly created office; Mrs. Kittle, succeeding Mrs. Laura Hughes Lunde, of Chicago, as recording secretary; Miss Elizabeth Ledwidge, of Pittsburgh, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. John Glaettli, of Madison, Wis., treasurer. Mrs. Lunde and Miss Nash were elected to the board of directors, replacing Miss Wood and Mrs. M. F. Proctor, of Vermont.

Columbus, Ohio, was selected for next spring's convention.

Hambidge Predicts Revolution In U. S. Educational System

Government Research Writer Tells League of Women Voters Unit Schools Will Concentrate on Individual Training

Quoting excerpts from his forthcoming book, "New Aims in Education," Gove Hambidge, principal research writer for the United States Department of Agriculture, predicted yesterday that coming changes in education would revolutionize the present system. He addressed a luncheon meeting of the department of government and education of the League of Women Voters at the Y. W. C. A.

Mr. Hambidge pointed out that the basis of the new movement is an individualizing of education, a method evolved from a realization that it is only as individuals that one learns. He said the new type of testing used in the 10-year survey of the results of education in the State of Pennsylvania, conducted by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Education, has revealed the weaknesses and failures of the present mass educational system.

He added that the failure of the educational system has come from the pressure colleges and schools have been under to provide academic education for all instead of the selected few for which it was originally designed. These pressures have originated because of economic conditions making it necessary to keep youth in school far beyond the elementary level, he said. The result, he indicated, has been that advanced academic training is denied to many who should have it and likewise is being given to as many whose aptitudes really lie in other directions.

It is the duty of the educational system to guide students into channels of learning and endeavor for which each as an individual is best fitted, he added.

Mrs. F. M. Walters, chairman of the department, presided.

Carpenters' Union Inducts 500 en Masse

All Are Required To Disavow Belief In Communist Party

In one of the largest local mass initiations of its kind 500 newly unionized carpenters last night received their membership cards from the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America at ceremonies in Carpenters Hall.

Before receiving his blue journeyman's card each new member had to take part in a ritual which included the phrase:

"The brotherhood does not recognize the Communist Party as a political organization."

Oaths were administered en masse by William J. Kelly, of Pittsburgh, who is a member of the general executive board in charge of the District chapter of the brotherhood, which is an A. F. of L. affiliate. Members of the union automatically become associated with the building and construction trades department of the A. F. of L. and are eligible to join any one of six locals in the carpenters union.

Six hundred more new members who could not be accommodated at last night's ritual will be initiated next month, Kelly declared. The new membership, announced last night for the first time since a special union drive began among unorganized home industry carpenters three months ago, will swell the brotherhood's total to some 4,000 local members, according to Kelly.

Welcoming the new members was General Representative Walter Dunn, of the brotherhood's national office who called upon the initiates to become "good union members."

Dunn outlined the brotherhood's advantages by citing among the benefits a $300 death policy, $400 disability benefit, and a pension or care in the brotherhood's Florida home throughout the remainder of their lives for those permanently disabled.

The hundreds of parties and dances which have been held for the blood and serum bank fund will continue Monday night with a benefit to be given by Bunker Hill Post, American Legion, at its clubrooms, 807 Monroe street northeast.

He was with the Probate Court for 20 years, retiring four years ago.

Steelman Calls Conciliation Best Way Out in Labor Rows

Job of Mediator Is to Encourage Analytical Approach, He Says To Conference on Public Speaking

Voluntary conciliation is the most effective means of settling labor disputes, it was stated in a paper by John R. Steelman, director of conciliation of the U. S. Department of Labor, read at last night's session of the Eastern Public Speaking Conference at the Mayflower Hotel.

Discussing "The Function of Discussion in the Mediation of Labor Disputes," the paper declared that "a dispute ended by two parties is better than any dispute concluded by a third party, no matter how impartial the settlement may be.

"The conciliation service forces no law . . . its primary function is to educate and enlighten . . . The job of the conciliator is to encourage the analytical rather than the emotional approach."

Paper Discussed

Leading a discussion of the paper were Dr. J. Calvin Callaghan, of Lehigh University; Dr. H. F. Harding, of George Washington University; Dr. Wilbur S. Howell, of Princeton, and Dr. Lester Thonssen, of the College of the City of New York.

Prof. John F. Dashiell, of the University of North Carolina, discussed "The Importance and Scope of Research in Group Discussion."

Comments on this paper were led by Dr. Norman W. Mattis, of Harvard; Dr. Robert T. Oliver, of Bucknell University; Dr. William Utterback, of the College of the City of New York, and Dr. Walter Wilke, of New York University. Dr. Joseph F. O'Brien, of Pennsylvania State College, presided at the evening session.

Slovenly Talk Deplored

Slovenly manners of speech received considerable eloquent chastising at sessions held earlier in the day.

Some 250 speech instructors and students picked apart the English language as it is spoken by the average American citizen. The general theme centered around speech education in public schools and colleges, with many speakers lamenting the lack of adequate courses on the subject.

Reporting that from 8 to 20 per cent of all school pupils have noticeable speech defects, Miss Ethel Sunny, of Wilson Teachers College, stressed the necessity of proper speech training among elementary school children.

If carelessness with the spoken word is allowed to develop, she said, the child grows up with a slangy, "shortcut" method of talking.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, welcomed the delegates.

Certain radio programs, motion pictures and comic strips are spreading bad speech influences on the younger generation, said Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of District schools.

Dr. Ordway Tead, president of the board of higher education, New York, outlined his theories on speech training in colleges and universities, contending the important factor in speaking is "what have you to say and what good reason have you for saying it?"

Dr. Yeager Presides

Dr. W. Hayes Yeager, instructor at George Washington University, presided at yesterday's meeting as president of the conference.

Thirteen sectional meetings were held throughout the day, with subjects including rhetoric, dramatics, interpretation and American oratory.

The conference will continue through today with Dr. George Gallup, director of the public opinion poll, as one of the principal speakers. Delegates also will hear several noted newspaper correspondents and editors as well as radio commentators.

Leg Caught Atop 12-Ft. Fence, Boy Saved by Firemen

Charles R. James, 6, of 1473 Irving street northwest, was only half successful yesterday in his attempt to scale the 12-foot fence surrounding the Powell Junior High School playground and his failure brought out the fire rescue squad.

CHARLES

Charles had little trouble negotiating the first 12 feet, those going up. He straddled the top to catch his breath before the journey down, but his foot became enmeshed in the wire fence. He was stranded.

Undaunted, Charles kept his plight to himself and tried to get free. Apparently a kindhearted neighbor saw the difficulty the boy was in because a call was sent to the fire rescue squad.

Firemen hurried to the scene on Hyatt place northwest, near Lamont street, and quickly extricated Charles with the aid of a ladder.

Rev. Schnabel Feted on 25th Year as Pastor

Albright Congregation Honors Its Founder In Oral, Floral Praise

The congregation of Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, which the Rev. George E. Schnabel started 14 years ago, last night saluted him upon completion of 25 years in the ministry.

Led by Dr. Sam Stewart, president of the board of trustees, several hundred church members and friends and relatives from other cities showered the pastor, his wife and daughter with oral and floral tributes.

Classmate Present

From Rochester, N. Y., came Dr. Daniel Schauss, the clergyman's lifelong friend and former classmate, to recall their first associations at a summer religious conference in that State.

"From that moment I formed an impression of earnestness, sincerity of heart, fervor and zeal which I have seldom found to that degree," he told the guests, who later applauded as the Rev. M. Schnabel was presented with a gold watch, chain and cross.

For Mrs. Schnabel there was a huge basket of flowers and later much praise from her husband for having contributed toward his success at Albright and in earlier pastorates.

Seated behind Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, who spoke briefly, were the pastor's two sisters—Mrs. J. B. Frederiksen, of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. P. J. McElvia, of Olean, N. Y., and an aunt, Mary E. Boas, of Reading, Pa.

Others Bring Greetings

Others who brought greetings on the occasion were M. Bunde, chairman of arrangements; Dr. Stewart, Ernest Pullman, George Corbin, president of the Men's Brotherhood, and former president of the Manor Park Citizens Association; E. O. Turner, Jack Osborne, W. F. Snyder, Mrs. Frances Stewart and others.

The Rev. Mr. Schnabel launched the congregation in 1925 under a tent on the present site at Fourth and Rittenhouse streets northwest, with 13 members. It now has over 500 members in the church and more than 700 in the Sunday school.

Capital Pair Win Women's Bridge Trophy

Mrs. Van Devanter And Mrs. Lemon Take Alexandria Match

By Marian H. Barre.

Mrs. James H. Lemon and Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter, of Washington, finished in top place by a fraction of a point to win the women's championship yesterday afternoon in the Old Dominion Bridge Tournament, being held at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. The game was the first event on a program of four championships.

The winner's score was 146.5 match points to 145.8 points for Mrs. J. E. Folline and Mrs. F. Harrison, of Norfolk. Mrs. Folline was one of the outstanding players in the last Washington tournament, winning two District titles.

Mrs. D. E. Stephan and Miss Katherine McNutt, of Washington, finished third with 140.9 points. The Baltimore partnership of Mrs. A. Rutherford and Mrs. M. C. Kolb, 134.1, ranked fourth. There was a tie for fifth place between Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker and Mrs. D. H. Mott, Washington, and Mrs. J. J. Iago and Mrs. J. V. Bragg, of Baltimore.

While only 23 pairs were enrolled, the field was the strongest of any recent tournament. Among the out-of-town stars were Mrs. L. W. Lord, Mrs. E. Behrend, Mrs. S. Newman, Mrs. J. P. Daiger, Mrs. F. J. Mowell, and Mrs. F. L. Chaplin, all of Baltimore.

The trophy for the women's game is the Edith Swanson Vase, donated by the former president of the Washington Bridge League. Mrs. T. Martin Boyle and Mrs. M. R. Reddy, Washington, were the defending champions.

Play for the mixed pair title began in the evening session. The Richmond News-Leader Trophy goes into competition today. This is the ranking event of the tournament. It will be played in two sessions with a qualifying round in the afternoon. Players who fail to qualify for the finals will compete in a second-flight section.

Refugee Couple To Be Wed Here By Rabbi in Exile

The District Courthouse clerk yesterday issued a marriage license for an all-refugee wedding—bride, bridegroom and parson all emigres from Hitler's Germany.

The bridegroom-elect is Siegfried Kilsheimer, 44, a sausage maker. His fiancee is Gerta Loewenstein, 26, a waitress. Rabbi Alfred Jacobs will perform the ceremony, date of which was not announced.

She came over from Germany about two years ago, a year after Kilsheimer. They met in Washington, where she has a brother, also a sausage maker, and he has five sisters and four brothers.

Oscar H. Store, 33, of Columbus, Ohio, arrested March 22, was held yesterday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage under $2,500 bond on a charge of violating the Mann Act. Held as a material witness was Effie Rose, 19, of Columbus, arrested with Shore. Both were arrested by Detective Roy Blick.

Traffic Inspector, Who Likes To Tinker, Works Out Problem

Safety Inspector Bunker explains his traffic light control system to Phyllis Jaeger at the District Building

E. J. Bunker Believes He Has Devised 'Better' Control System for Thirteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue

Like many others in Washington, E. J. Bunker, the District's safety inspector, has worked out what he believes would be a "better" traffic control system for Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

"I like to tinker with gadgets," Bunker said yesterday.

His gadget consists of a couple of batteries, a piece of brown wrapping paper (which represents the street layout at the intersection), some rubber bands, cellophane, little scraps of wood, several small electric bulbs and a small electric motor.

There would be only three movements of traffic under the Bunker system, instead of five.

"There may be a few 'bugs' in my traffic system, but I haven't discovered them yet," he said.

The first movement would be for cars to go east and west on Pennsylvania avenue and for pedestrians to cross Thirteenth street.

On the second movement cars on Pennsylvania avenue would make a left turn into Thirteenth street and a right turn for cars coming out of Thirteenth street into Pennsylvania avenue. This right turn would be only for a short interval, after which the pedestrian would cross Pennsylvania avenue on the west and east sides.

The third movement would carry cars out of Thirteenth street making a left turn into Pennsylvania avenue and a right turn from the avenue into Thirteenth street. Pedestrians would cross the west side of the avenue.

"My system would require only four traffic posts," Bunker said.

'Possum Goes Calling

A strange tourist, an ailing 'possum, came to Washington Thursday night and walked up the steps of the apartment house at 2205 California street northwest.

From such elevation, next best thing to a seat in one of Washington's famed trees, the beast was looking around when Stanton Prentiss, resident in the apartment, surprised it. They became friends.

Early yesterday, the apartment house janitor thought differently of visiting 'possums and nocturnal friendships. He gave the 'possum to the milkman, who was the first person the janitor saw.

George Raft Hits the Only Jail He's Missed

'House Across the Bay' Opens at the Capitol; Salici Revue on Stage

Neither good acting nor good looks can keep Master Georgie Raft out of jail after he's faced a court in the movies. In "House Across the Bay," now at the Capitol, the cinema moguls pack George off to Alcatraz over a trifling matter of income tax. On top of that they separate him from Joan Bennett, alienate Joan's affections to Walter Pidgeon (of all people!), finally shoot and drown him in San Francisco Bay. This leaves George with no new jails nor modes of execution in the United States. There's nothing left for Raft but Devil's Island and the guillotine.

There's a restful nostalgia about the words, "House Across the Bay," but that begins and ends right there. The picture starts with a tiff between "line girls" in a night club, progresses through various sporting, racketeering and gambling phases to the courtroom and the "Rock." The "House Across the Bay" is the house that Joan Bennett rents so that she can have a fine view of Alcatraz while her husband is doing his time.

Joan Bennett proves that she has the makings of a No. 1 Broadway night club singer in two luring numbers, one strangely resembling "My Man" and the other a Mexican trick, called "Walking My Chihuahua." Also, thanks to Irene, La Bennett is attired more gorgeously than ever before. Dance-minded damsels should study the Bennett chiffon frocks, prettiest seen on the screen in months.

Raft's racketeer role is of a piece with former ones. He plays it in tight-lipped, hard-eyed style with occasional flashing grins, one brief transition to despair.

Real acting of the picture, we'd say, is largely confined to Lloyd Nolan as a weak, cruel and crooked lawyer, and Gladys George in the part of a good-hearted but not well-behaved blonde manicurist. Walter Pidgeon walks through his part like an English leading man.

The Capitol orchestra and Maestro Sam Jack Kaufman are having a picnic this week with a "Spring" overture that appropriately for this spring, includes a first class storm. We also detected the pleasant orchestral assurance that "It Isn't Raining Rain, It's Raining Violets." The atmosphere of musical fun was climaxed by Art Brown's organing of nutsy parodies for the audience to sing. The folks joined in with a vim.

The Salici Puppet Revue is bigger and better than ever, including a can-can dancer, a full orchestra, a singing and fluting contest and a bicycle race, as well as that noted "Neapolitan Evening."

Most unique acrobatic act going around is that of Large and Morgner, both one-legged and fine acrobats in spite of it. They reaped the applause honors of the show. Al Norman does rubbery-legged dances and smart impersonations winding up with a great impression of a subway rider. The Rockets are doing a mechanical dance this week, but we couldn't figure what kind of a machine they were supposed to be.

'The Grapes of Wrath' Becomes a Magnificent Film; Earle's 'Singapore' Tosses Sling of Mad Merriment

John Steinbeck's Novel Arrives on Palace Screen as Superbly Significant Picture

By Richard L. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B Bell.

In the years to come when great films, significant films, are recalled, "The Grapes of Wrath" will have a place in every discussion. For John Ford's masterly direction, Nunnally Johnson's compassionate screen adaptation of the John Steinbeck novel and a large cast's impressive sincerity have combined to create a work of magnificence and strength. It opened yesterday at the Palace.

Those who found the Steinbeck novel unpleasant and crude may be surprised to find that on the screen "The Grapes of Wrath" takes on an enviable dignity, stressing as only the camera can the pictorial appeal of the Joads. Ma in her strength, Tom in his questioning, are artlessly brought to life by Jane Darwell and Henry Fonda in a fashion that the book, vividly as it was written, could but suggest.

From the moment the great director trains his camera on the long gray road in the dewy gray light of early morning, never to alternate his blacks and grays for a single inch of film, one realizes that here is an understanding, thrilling story of our own time, a terrifying question engrossingly posed.

Tom Joad is home from jail on parole but the Oklahoma dust has swept away what was home to him. His relations, too, are about to move away when, with the doubting man of God who has lost his faith, Tom finds them. There is talk of jobs in the California orchards, of a new Promised Land and all the "Okies" catch at the straw. On a sickening jallopy they make the trek west, ever hopeful, ever discouraged, but ever pushing on.

This heroic journey and the subsequent hunt for jobs, any jobs, become the motivation for some of the most moving scenes the screen has revealed. There is the constant demand of gasoline to make the truck push on with its eleven passengers. There is the unhappy sight of grandpa, dazed and miserable, dying at last by the roadside. There is the scene in which Ma Joad covers up the death of the old mother because it would keep them from crossing a State line. There is the pathetic little scene in a sandwich joint when a waitress and a truck driver conspire to give the Joads bread. There is Rosasharn's sad pregnancy.

There is jubilation, too, in "The Grapes of Wrath;" when the Federal camp gives them shelter, when there is dancing, when there are kids rough-housing and when Ma Joad so triumphantly states "we Okies, because we are the people, will endure like the earth."

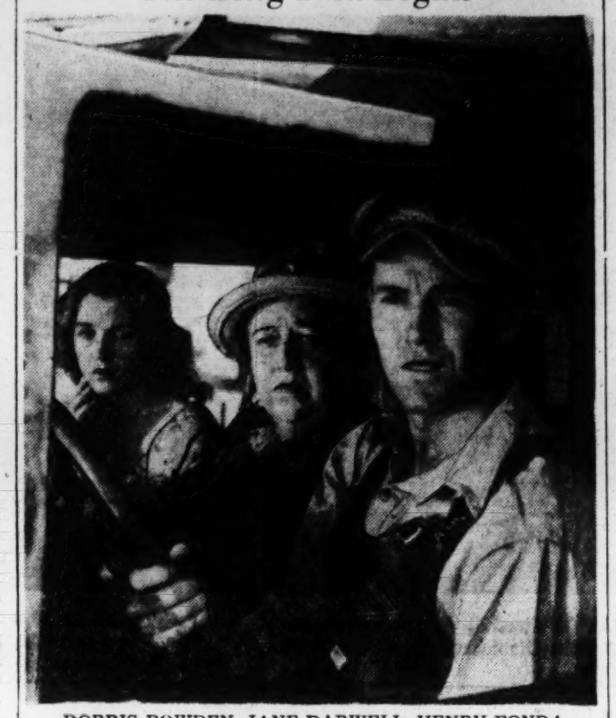
As if the superb script of Mr. Johnson and the direction of Mr. Ford that has its only rival in his "The Informer," were not sufficient, Twentieth Century-Fox has cast the picture perfectly. Fonda and Miss Darwell play with their hearts understanding and Charley Grapewin's and Zeffie Tilbury's grandpa and grandma are as thrillingly enlivened. John Carradine's doubting preacher has just the exact amount of bitter skepticism so essential to the point of the story.

So, with the production of this thoughtful study of life today, the screen seems at last to have reached a maturity, a maturity during which it will grow and grow into the medium not only of entertainment, but of enlightenment that it must inevitably become.

The Long Trek Begins



DORRIS BOWDEN, JANE DARWELL, HENRY FONDA in "The Grapes of Wrath," the magnificent film which opened yesterday at the Palace, Rosasharn, Ma and Tom are looking for the last time on the land they loved before setting out for their promised land

Bing Crosby, Bob Hope And Dorothy Lamour In Happy Musical; Midgets on Stage

As dizzily hilarious as a sixth Singapore Sling, "Road to Singapore," the Earle's musical film starring Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, is a definite cure for what have you. This merry farce is accompanied by a stage revue that is as brief and as cute as a pretty, blonde midget. The two roll into the most carefree hours your harrassed correspondent has had in too many months.

But all this can scarcely be news, for when he arrived at the theater yesterday, your reviewer had to pry himself in. As different in concept from "The Grapes of Wrath" as any film could possibly be, "Road to Singapore" is equally as successful in achieving its point.

For this is meant for laughter. Picture, then, Bob Hope and Bing Crosby running away from women and their fine fiddle-faddle, seeking surcease in a Tropic isle of the South Seas. Peace, it's wonderful!

Into this masculine Eden stalks the very Eveish form of Dorothy Lamour. She captivates the lads who are reluctant to be captivated, but even starvation in the South Pacific seems better to Bing than living in a modernistic apartment in San Francisco as a scion of the great shipping family. Every time he thinks of it, he doesn't mind the stew his exceptional housekeeper has brewed.

What little the other members of the cast have to do, they do smartly. Charles Coburn is particularly effective as a troubled father and Anthony Quinn stands out as an easily retired menace. Judith Barrett and Jerry Colonna are also good, if not important.

The stage bill is called "Big Little Show of 1940," and that's exactly it. Harry Anger had the smart idea of rounding up a bunch of Liliputians and placing the little folk on the same stage with the ever-wonderful Roxyettes. The result is elegant novelty.

Things start off well from the very beginning. It's a martial scene with the girls on stilts and the little folk being as precision-conscious as the gals. That is a starter that is hard to live, but they manage it. Mary Best is a pretty prima donna; Ronnie Street, an able M. C., and with Edith Rollason singing "Oh Johnny," we get the idea of why the song was written in the first place.

They were referring to you. The statement has been signed by Duke Maffetore, one of the prisoners now under arrest . . . Joe Louis: Mike Jacobs, who promoted your fight against Paychek, was in an auto smash-up on Monday. His car turned over and was demolished . . . Martin Dies: Warner Brothers wanted to make a film replying to your Red Hollywood charges, but Jack Warner vetoed it.

JOHN GARFIELD: Albert Einstein attended the Princeton premiere of your new show, "Heavenly Express." He came backstage later, shaking his head, and muttering: "I cannot understand it? . . . "YOU—cannot understand such a simple play?" asked Aline MacMahon . . . "This is what I cannot understand," explained Einstein, "A modern play—and nothing about Russia?"

DEANNA DURBIN: Joe Pasternak, who made your newest movie, "It's A Date," came directly to New York to discuss a new contract. He's made nine successive hit-films, and wants his salary doubled. . . . Lepke: William Kleinman, who was your defense-counsel, will represent "Pittsburgh Phil" Strauss, in the Murder Syndicate trial. . . . Edith Dahl: Your husband, Harold Dahl, whose life you saved by sending your photo to Gen. Franco, promises never to get into any more bad-check jams. He told the Overseas Press Club: "I've thrown away my fountain pen."

JIM LONDOS: The Theater Guild is casting its newest show, "Love's Old Sweet Song," and one of the roles is that of a wrestler. Mrs. Lawrence Langner arrived at the Guild office Wednesday, and saw a group of wrestlers waiting. One of them was "Angel," who recently was examined by Harvard professors, because of the abnormal size of his head . . . Mrs. Langner rushed inside and told Eddie Dowling about the wrestlers, and the one with the huge head and short body. Dowling directed: "Just send in that head" . . . Adolph A. Berle, jr.: Didn't you write two speeches for Jim Farley? . . .

GOV. CLYDE R. HOEY: Clifford Odets, vacationing away from New York, drove to Philadelphia. He saw Leopold Stokowski, said he was seeking some nice vacation spot, and Stokowski replied: "Try Carolina. It's lovely in the Spring" . . . In Washington, Archibald MacLeish told Odets: "Go to Carolina. It's beautiful in the Spring" . . . Clifford then received a wire from Paul Green, at Chapel Hill, N. C., advising: "Come here. Don't miss the Carolina spring" . . . Odets arrived this week, found the air soft and balmy, and went to sleep. He woke up—to find the Carolina earth covered with 4 inches of snow.

Hear Federal men are still looking for $200,000 in gold which owners never turned over to Uncle Sam. Seems they're afraid they'll take it to one of the gold mines melt it up, and the government will have to pay the prevailing price. Wonder what the salaries of the G-men will be while they're looking for it. Which reminds me of the farmer who lost a dime while plowing and hired a man at a dollar a day for three days to find it . . . John Qualen was so good in "Grapes of Wrath" that he's had offers from every studio in town. And prior to that, hadn't been seen for a long time. Because after he did the father in the Quints' first picture, no matter what he played, when he appeared in a serious part the audience screamed, and could remember him only as the amazed parent of five.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 29 (INS).—Our famous colleague, Nellie Bly, who traveled around the world in 72 days, is to be immortalized in the movies. No wonder no one ever thought until now of filming the story of Nellie, who in 1890 was considered the greatest woman reporter. Certainly she was the most daring, for she set out on her around-the-world expedition with only a small handbag—and remember that was before the day of airplanes, fast ships and trains.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The story of Nellie was written by M. M. Musselman, who sold it to Harry Edington for R.-K.-O. Jean Arthur, who has played more girl reporters than any other actress and who could play Nellie to a fair-thee-well, is being sought by R.-K.-O. Wearing a plaid cape and a funny cap, Nellie set out on her hazardous journey in late 1889, returning in 1890. Cary Grant co-stars opposite Jean or whoever plays the girl reporter.

'Sidewalks of London' Stars Vivien Leigh at Metropolitan

Those two big names, Charles Laughton and Vivien Leigh, will draw wise moviegoers to see "Sidewalks of London." But while both of these stars give the great performances to be expected of them, the picture stands up well in its own right as a story of a side of London life practically unknown on this side of the Atlantic.

The lowest rung of English show business is that represented by the "buskers," street minstrels, dancers and actors who pass their caps for pennies, are frequently moved along none too gently by the British "bobbies."

Vivien Leigh graduates from a would-be dancer and fairly expert little thief into the ranks of the "buskers," thence through mingled passages of love, betrayal and ambition into musical comedy, finally attains the great ambition of actresses the world over—a ticket to Hollywood. Her finely shaded performance will give you an idea of why she was chosen for the role of Scarlett O'Hara.

Charles Laughton demonstrates the magnificence of his acting by giving the worst recitation of Kipling's "If" within the memory of man. It's so terrible that it's classic, should be put into the motion picture gallery along with his wonderful rendition of the "Gettysburg Address" as an example of what an actor can do.

Everyone who is interested in the finer angles of motion pictures should see "Sidewalks of London." It is a unique example of an imperfect picture with flawless star performances.

Columbia

"Gone With the Wind" is continuing its run at the Columbia Theater, its ninth week on F street.

So little remains to be said, thought or written about this fabulously publicized film, that one can do little more than observe again the clean sweep the film made in the Academy Award selections Voted the outstanding picture of the year, it brought awards to Vivien Leigh for the best performance by an actress; Hattie McDaniel for the best supporting work by an actress; Victor Fleming for the best direction; the late Sidney Howard for the best screen play; Lyle, "heeler" for the best achievement in art direction; Hal Kern and James Newcom for the best achievement in film editing and Ernest Halle for the finest color achievements.

With such a degree of authoritative acclaim and with Clark Gable, Olivia de Havilland and Leslie Howard in the other pivotal roles, it is little wonder that "Wind" is still blowing.

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, MARCH 30, 1940 17

Louis Stops Paychek in Second Round

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 29.—We would like to say at this time that the Boston Red Sox will be the new American League champions at the end of the 1940 pennant race.

We would like to say it, but unfortunately there is no reason for any such statement.

POVICH

It's sort of a shame, too, because the Red Sox with the strongest Boston ball club since the town had its last pennant 22 years ago, seemed destined to finish second once more to the New York Yankees. The best Red Sox team since 1918 is strictly up against it.

Joe Cronin's club will very probably outhit the Yankees. And defensively, the Red Sox may be only a shade inferior. But in pitching—ah, there's the rub—Boston will be presenting a pitiable front for a team that is thinking about winning the pennant.

With the Yankees' pitching staff, the Red Sox would probably breeze home to the pennant by a greater margin than even the Yankees will win it this year. Save for the pitching—and the catching—the Red Sox are as fine a club as the Yankees, perhaps a better one.

After 40-year-old Mose Grove has taken his regular weekly turn—weekly, mind you, because Grove pitches only every seven days—Manager Joe Cronin is taking a risky sort of gamble every time he sends another pitcher to the mound.

Even with the Red Sox batting .291 as a team last year—outhitting the Yankees by four points and driving in more runs than any other club with the exception of the Yanks—Grove and Freddy Ostermueller were the only regular Boston pitchers who could win more games than they lost.

Young Emerson Dickman, a highly-regarded right hander, won eight games and lost three for the Red Sox last year, and old Joe Heving had a won-and-lost record of 11 and 3, but they weren't regular starters. Most of their victories were achieved as relief workers when the vaunted Boston punch asserted itself after they had been rushed to the rescue of faltering starters.

Joe Cronin can't point to a single new addition to his Boston pitching staff and say: "Here's a guy who is bound to be a consistent winner for us." He might get help from Woody Rich, but Rich was plagued with a sore arm last season and won only six games against five defeats at both Boston and Louisville. Jim Bagby is coming back from the minors, but he was no ball of fire even with Little Rock last season. From Minneapolis, Cronin has brought up Herb Hash and Jimmy Butland, top pitchers of the American Association last year, but at this writing they must be put down as a major league gamble.

Contrast the Red Sox's pitching plight with the happy circumstances of the Yankees on the mound. At times when Joe Cronin won't know next summer where his next winning pitcher is coming from, Joe McCarthy can wiggle his finger at any one of a half dozen superlative risks and send a star to the mound.

Any time McCarthy wants to win a ball game, he has merely to call on Red Ruffing and the Yanks will be heavy favorites. Ruffing is nearing 36 and as the refrain has it he can't go on forever, but they were saying that last year and the year before. The old man got himself 21 wins in 1939.

Lefty Gomez had a poor season last year, winning only 12 and losing eight. But that didn't deter the Yankees from winning the pennant by the large margin of 17 games. Can Gomez bounce back with a big year? It won't make much difference. The Yanks don't need Gomez.

They have a young man named Atley Donald who won 13 games last season before he was licked. Apparently he will do all right this year. And another rookie named Steve Sundra stepped out with ten straight wins before finally ending up with a record of 11 won and only one lost. These two young men must be classed as sensations. However, hold your hats, because it is more or less agreed in American League circles that neither Donald, with his record of 13 and 4, nor Sundra, with his mark of 11 and 1, is the best of the Yanks' amazing rookie pitching crop. There is yet another guy.

He's a New York Italian boy named Marius Russo. He's a left hander and after being called in from Newark early in 1939, he pitched eight wins for the Yanks against three defeats. His record is not as gaudy as Donald's or Sundra's, but he's a better pitcher than either one of 'em, according to American League opinion. In fact, Marius Russo is the most feared pitcher on the Yankee club aside from Ruffing.

The roll-call of Yankee pitchers won't make very nice reading up Boston way. To continue, we cite Monte Pearson, Oral Hildebrand, Spurgeon Chandler and Bump Hadley, backed by Johnny Murphy, the best relief man in the league. This latter crop of second-flight New York pitchers comprise a better staff than Cronin can point to on his Boston club. Cronin surely seems to have a rendezvous with second place.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, March 29.—They're building the New York mutuel-window runways in such a way as to make them run downhill toward the ticket-seller, to facilitate quick betting and consequently improve the breed of not only the thoroughbreds but also the bettors. They'll probably be greasing the runways by June.

CONSIDINE

But an awful lot of dough is going to fail to get into those totes, when the State of New York joins 15 other States in the horse racing business next month.

A lot of betting money is going to be missing from the pools when the tracks and the State begin dividing up their 10 per cent. There are going to be countless leaks—and right on the premises, too.

The people of New York voted 3-to-1 to run the bookies out of the horseparks and put in the machines. Some of the legislators, acting with a perversity that cannot be dismissed as traditional daffiness, have fought like madmen to amend the racing bill in such a way as would enable the bookies to come back and operate along with the machines. The statesmen should be reminded that they are making a cheap spectacle of their public offices, in thus trying to frustrate the will of the people. Not that it would help much to remind them.

The public sincerely tried to rid itself of the books. It voted for the machines in face of heavy bombarding from the other side—a flow of well-phrased propaganda from the bookies, and a last-minute blast against the machines by Mayor LaGuardia. But it isn't likely that it will have its complete wish fulfilled. If the legislators don't sneak the bookies in there, somehow, they'll still get in.

With the exception of a few showoffs among the Hollywood hams at California tracks New York has more big bettors than any other racing State. These $100 to $5,000 bettors have been doing business with bookies at New York tracks for years. The big bettors are going to be reluctant to dump their money in the totes and knock down the prices of their horses.

Any of a thousand ruses could be used to place the bet with bookies-in-customer's-clothing. The State, of course, will get no cut on this business—which conceivably may be enormous. And the Pinkertons will have no way of ascertaining whether persons at the New York tracks this season are making bets with the disenfranchised bookies (who are certain to be much in evidence around their old stamping grounds) or simply inquiring about their Aunt Nellie's tumor.

We think the fight of the year—from an artistic and financial angle—will be the Tony Galento-Max Baer horseplay in Jersey City's Roosevelt Stadium a month hence. The place will seat nearly 50,000 and unquestionably will be filled, not only because it should be one of those sweaty fandangoes that may make ring history, but also because Mayor Hague probably will issue a royal decree to the effect that all his loyal subjects must attend—or risk being exiled to the Passaic salt mines.

Mike Jacobs hasn't decided what he will charge for seats, except that they will begin at a buck and a half. The Jacob Beachcombers are talking about a fancy quarter of a million dollar gate, whihch gives you some idea of the state of the heavyweight division and the charm of the gladiators. Times being what they are, it is likely that the winner of this one will get another shot at Louis—not necessarily in New York. That's why Johnny Ray, one of Billy Conn's managers, and Al Weill, who handles Arturo Godoy, are trying to get Mike to line up Louis fights for either of their men before Galento and Baer start slugging.

Tony and Max will begin getting out of shape for their fight within the next few days.

Schaefer in Second-Place Tie

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 29.—Jake Schaefer, Cleveland, climbed into a tie for second place in the world's three-cushion billiard tournament today with a 50 to 42 victory over Allen Hall, of Chicago, in 54 innings.

The triumph placed Schaefer in a deadlock with Jay Bozeman, of Vallejo, Calif., for the runner-up spot with 8 wins apiece in 13 games. They trail pace-setting Willie Hoppe, New York, by five full games.

Hall has won only 5 of 15 games, leaving him one notch out of the cellar.

The inning score:

Schaefer—100 000 033 152 125 041 000 300 100 020 430 000 012 000 003 000 200 001—50. High run, 5; innings, 54.

Joe Louis has just sent a vicious right-hand smash to the Des Moines heavyweight's chin and the challenger is shown toppling over backward—out cold. The champion had floored his man three times for counts of nine in the first round of the Madison Square Garden "battle." This was the tenth defense of the crown for the Detroit Bomber. Only 11,000 saw the uneven battle

This Was the End for a Paychek Who Bounced 3 Times

Victim Is Knocked Cold; Down Three Times in Opener

Tenth Defense of Title Proves Nothing; 11,000 See Iowan Back Away and Go Down; Right to Jaw Ends Action

By Sid Feder.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Madison Square Garden, New York, March 29.—Joe Louis sang Johnny Paychek sound to sleep with five punches tonight without even mussing his hair.

Before a slim crowd, as heavyweight champion audiences go, the Brown Bomber floored the Des Moines challenger three times in the first round of their 15-round bout, then knocked him stiffer than a frozen frankfurter in 44 seconds of the second heat to dance out of the ring with his title as safe as money in the bank.

There wasn't even a resemblance to a fight in this, Louis' tenth defense of fistiana's richest prize. To be brutally frank, the corn-country fiddler was as woeful a title challenger as ever tried to grab off the brass ring. He back-pedaled as fast as he could from the opening bell, pawing frantically with his left hand, and he threw just one punch throughout the fight. That was a looping right which just grazed the champ's jaw after Johnny was down for the second time in the first round.

Nothing to "Fight"

For all the competition in the brief waltz—or for all the proof it furnished as to whether Louis is "slipping," as many shouted after his poor 15-round showing against Arturo Godoy last month—this might have been a May-pole dance. It just meant nothing.

Louis, in fine condition at 200½ pounds compared to Paychek's 187¾, didn't even work up a sweat.

"In fact," he drawled in his dressing room afterward, "Ah dunno if ah even have to take a shower. Ah'll get dressed, grab a quick bite and make the 11:45 train to Chicago.

"Mah easiest fight? Well, Ah'm not sure. Ah had a couple of one-round knockouts, y'know."

Those one-rounders—in which he disposed of Max Schmeling, John Henry Lewis and Jack Roper—couldn't have been any easier than this one, however.

Louis came out of his corner at the bell and Paychek came out of his. That's the last time they were even. Joe kept coming forward and the 25-year-old Iowan just went backkward, almost at the same pace as Greyhound used in trotting to victory in the Hambletonian.

Joe continued shuffling and stabbing with a straight left hand. He maneuvered and maneuvered until he had Paychek backed in a neutral corner. Then he pitched. Paychek escaped momentarily to midring, where a right-hand shot caught him on the jaw. Down he went for a nine-count.

Keeps Backing Up

He got up and back-pedalled some more. Before very long, a left-right combination flattened his whiskers, put him down again, this time in Joe's very own corner so that his chief cheering and chowder society could see it. Johnny took nine more. Then he got up and tossed a futile, desperate right that was just short. A moment later, Louis fired from his right cannon again and as might be expected, Johnny went down again in Joe's corner. He got up and Louis rushed in for the kill just as the bell rang.

Benny Leonard, working in Paycheck's corner, shouted frantic instructions to his gladiator during the minute rest period, but he might just as well have saved the wear and tear on his tonsils.

Johnny came out and tried to back-water again. Joe caught up with his rival near a neutral corner, feinted his left and then threw a vicious righthand shot that crunched against Paychek's chin like Bronko Nagurski used to crush into opposing football lines.

Paychek was lifted clear off his feet, sailed through the air for a foot or so, and spread-eagled flat on his back—in dreamland. Referee Arthur Donovan didn't even bother counting, but just waved Paychek's handlers to come in and get him.

The crowd of 11,620 fans, who contributed to a gross gate of $62,481—smallest cash register total Louis has attracted since he won the title three years ago—booed at the finish. They had paid to see a fight.

1 Knockdown Is All Paychek Can Remember

Victim of Joe Louis' Second-Round T.K.O. Had Address on Robe

By Henry Super
United Press Staff Writer

New York, March 29.—Johnny Paychek let the folks know his forwarding address before he stepped into the ring against Joe Louis tonight. It was a lucky thing, because Johnny forgot everything that happened after he caught Louis' first right on the whiskers.

"I remember going down the first time and after that it was a blank," Paychek said.

Just in case they would forget where to send the body, Johnny had his address emblazoned on the back of the bathrobe he wore into the ring:

"Paychek, Hotel Chamberlain, Des Moines, Iowa."

When he came out of the fog in his dressing room, baldheaded Johnny said:

Very Odd Feeling

"It was the damndest feeling being hit by that guy. I can't describe it. I remember going down the first time, but after that I must have been asleep."

Johnny's "brain," former Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard, described at length the plan of battle he had mapped out for Paychek.

Briefly, Johnny was supposed to throw his vaunted right while Louis was still wide open, seeking a first-round knockout which Leonard figured the champion was sure to do.

"But I never even got a chance to throw it," Paychek said. "He kept me on defense all the while and I was afraid to cut loose."

Paychek ended his discourse with the same words which come from the mouths—but not the hearts—of all Louis' victims:

"I'd sure like to fight him again."

Joe Turns on Wit

Louis' comments were pithy, to say the least.

"It was a vacation," Joe mumbled.

There was an air of levity in the champion's dressing room and even Joe, who wouldn't recognize a gag even if it wore boxing trunks, joined in.

Someone asked Joe if he heard all the booes after the "fight."

"I thought them was handclaps," he said.

The boys asked the champion if that "terrific right hook" which Paychek threw, hurt much.

Quick as a flash Joe had a dandy answer:

"What right hook?"

Everybody roared.

Metz, Guldahl, Mangrum Lead In $5,000 Open

Trio Shoots 64s to Break Record, Nick Par by Six Strokes

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Asheville, N. C., March 29.—The par 70 shooters were strictly out of the running today as the country's touring golf pros took the Asheville Country Club course apart and neglected to put it together again.

What they did put together, however, were some of the lowest scores of the winter tour. When Dick Metz came in with a six-under-par 64 for a new competitive course record, it looked pretty good, but before the afternoon was over, both score and record had been equaled in turn by Ralph Guldahl and Lloyd Mangrum.

All Metz was left with was the distinction of having been first home, and the honor of having the day's low score for the first nine, a sizzling 30 that was six under standard figures.

The best score for the back nine was posted by Frank Walsh, The Rumson (N. J.) veteran went around in three-under-par 31 that gave him a tie with P. G. A. champion Henry Picard at 65.

This amazing exhibition of par busting took the play away from Ben Hogan for the first time since his opening round in the North-South championship at Pinehurst. Even so, the little former Texan didn't lose his touch completely. He and Open Champion Byron Nelson wound up all even with 67s that were three better than regulation but good enough only for a tie for sixth place.

Hogan, as the late-coming sensation of the winter circuit, was paired with Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, the No. 1 money winner, back in competition after an absence of several weeks. The easy-going Westerner shot a 68, which was matched by Jug McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass.; Lawson Little, Leonard Dodson, of Kansas City, and Herman Keiser, of Apron, Ohio. Others to better par were Leo Walper, of Washington, D. C., Steve Warga, of New York, and

Zeke Bonura's Single Shuts Out Nats, 1-0

Former Washington First Sacker Drives in Only Run in Seventh; Leonard Hurls Excellent Ball for Six Innings

By Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 29.—The Nats' efforts went for naught today—nine naughts, in fact. They took a painful 1-0 beating from the New York Giants with 1,030 of the Orlando citizenry sitting in the rickety stands of Tinker Field.

Washington's defeat was painful in that (1) the winning blow was delivered by Giant Zeke Bonura, the man the Nats spurned, and (2) six innings of superlative pitching by Dutch Leonard was woefully wasted.

Big Jim Dean, brashest of the Nats' rookies, was making his debut before the curious eyes of Manager Bucky Harris today, and it was he who yielded the Giants the lone run of the ball game. It happened in the seventh inning when Dean came to grief on his third pitch in a Washington uniform.

Bonura Singles

That pitch was belted for a three-bagger by Harry Danning and the next hitter was Bonura. Big Zeke, making his first appearance at bat for the iants this season, delivered a single to left and the run was home.

In the three innings Young Dean pitched, he surrendered four of the Giants' eight hits, but it was not a disgraceful performance. In fact, Dean's work found Manager Harris somewhat elated. Danning's triple fell in deep left center, where George Case should have been playing for a leftfield hitter of Danning's type, and Bonura's blow which won the game was a fluke bounder over Cecil Travis' head.

Dean didn't walk a hitter, to the great delight of Harris. He did not cut loose with the same speed that he has showed Harris in practice, but he was the picture of poise and confidence on the mound. After yielding the Giants their run, he extricated himself from two other dangerous situations in a very becoming manner.

Walker's Muff Hurts

Wth Bonura still on base in the seventh, Dean forced Stewart to hit into a double play started by Jimmy Pofahl, and then he found himself in trouble again when Gerald Walker muffed Whitehead's low liner. He escaped another run when Buddy Lewis charged Gumbert's single to right and threw out Whitehead at the plate with ease when he attempted to score on the blow.

In the eighth, Seeds led off with a single against Dean and went to second on a sacrifice. But Dean caused Jo-Jo Moore to fly out and then, with the count three-and-two, he boldly flung a slow curve past Dickshot for the third out. In the ninth the Giants couldn't get to first base against him.

Harry Gumbert, the Giants' righthander from Baltimore, and Dutch Leonard shared the pitching honors. Gumbert pitched seven innings and allowed five hits. Leonard worked six innings and held the Giants to four. Two of the hits off Leonard were distinctly scratchy.

Cecil Travis was the only Washington athlete who wasn't bothered by the Giants' pitching. He made three of the Nats' seven hits to continue his sensational batting in the South.

Dot Kirby, Mrs. Page Play In Golf Final

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 29.—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, long-driving Chapel Hill housewife whose golf is better than many a man's, will defend her North and South women's championship tomorrow against Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga., in the 36-hole final match of the thirty-eighth annual tournament.

Mrs. Page eliminated Deborah Verry, of Worcester, Mass., 3 and 4, in their semifinal match today. Miss Kirby, the medalist, advanced to the final round by defeating Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., 3 and 2.

Although Mrs. Page, 1937 national champion, never was behind in today's match, she was hard pressed on the outgoing nine and rounded the turn 1 up. But coming home, she wont the tenth, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth and clinched the match when the fourteenth was halved.

Miss Kirby won her match at the sixteenth, which she and Miss Bauer halved with 4's. Two up at the turn, the Georgia lass had a tougher time coming back.

Greenberg's Homer Beats Reds, 10 to 8

Hank Gets Three Other Hits; DiMag Also Stars at Bat

By the United Press

Tampa, Fla., March 29.—Hank Greenberg blasted a home run with two on base, climaxing an eight-run rally in the seventh which brought the Detroit Tigers from behind and gave them a 10-8 victory over the Cincinnati Reds today.

Six hits coupled with two walks off the veteran Jim Turner furnished the power for the uprising after the Reds had held leads of 6-0 and 8-1. Greenberg collected four of the Tigers' hits, and Mike McCormick accounted for four of the Reds' 14. Billy Werber and Harry Craft each got three safeties for Cincinnati, and Rudy York blasted three for Detroit.

Bucky Walters continued his air-tight pitching for the Reds, allowing but two hits and one run for the first six innings.

Pirates Beat A's

Yuma, Ariz., March 29 (AP).—Behind the effective pitching of big Max Butcher, who went the route for the first time this year, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 9 to 1, here today. It was the fifth time in seven games the Pirates have beaten the A's.

Ray Berres' single in the seventh drove in 2 runs and broke a 1-to-1 tie. In the eighth the Pirates got five straight hits off Southpaw Jen-

Glens Falls, N. Y., March 29 (AP).—Durham, N. C., High School entered the finals of the twenty-first Eastern States interscholastic basketball tournament tonight with a 44-35 victory over Memorial High of West New York, N. J., in the first semifinal contest.

Blow-by Blow

ROUND ONE

ROUND TWO

Paychek was boxing better as Louis stalked him firing straight lefts. Louis landed a long left to cheek. Louis smashed a long vicious right flush to the chin and Paychek was lifted clear off his feet and landed flat on his back out cold with Louis a knockout winner in 44 seconds of the second round.

Jayfcee, Longest Shot in Race, Wins in Tropical Feature

Meade Booed After Riding Sir Damion

3-5 Favorite Bows By Length in Field Of Four; Winner Pays $18.10 Price

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, March 29.—C. H. Cleary's Jayfcee, the longest shot in the field of four, stunned the form players as he raced to a front-running victory in the Live Oak Purse at 6 furlongs featuring this afternoon's program of upsets. He was a clear length free of the 3-to-5 favorite, Sir Damion, at the finish, who in turn had two lengths over Night Tide. Float Away was last of the small band which was cut by the late scratch of Zoic.

The racing strip was in splendid shape for the feature after being slow earlier in the day, and the running time of 1:11 3-5 was excellent.

Off to a good start, Jayfcee and his rider, Irving Anderson, sprinted away from the field as if to make a runaway race of it. His margin at the half was two lengths, with Float Away second, Night Tide third and the favored Sir Damion, with Jockey Don Meade, fourth and last. As they headed into the stretch it seemed that his earlier efforts would tell on him while the field ran up fast as if to engulf him. Jayfcee was game, however, and under a strong ride retained a length of his early lead all the way to the wire. Sir Damion, once in stride, moved up rapidly but could not catch the leader.

Meade Is Booed

The winner paid $18.10, with mingled cheers and boos greeting the price, the favorite players jeering the return of Meade to the weighing-out platform. There was no show wagering.

Third race preliminaries were enlivened when Sly Heels, one of a field of nine 2-year-olds entered, threw his rider, Porter Roberts, at the barrier and ran away for nearly a mile before he was captured.

When the gates opened, Sly Heels was still full of run, sprinting into the early lead, followed by Jerisa and Star Blink. He soon found it too much of a task, however, and in the stretch On the Beam, ridden by J. McCoy, proved the gamest, at odds of 20 to 1. He was a half length ahead of Jerisa, with Codorniz close up in the third spot. All placing horses were outsiders, On the Beam paying $42.60.

Ariel Star Wins

Ariel Star became the first winning favorite of the afternoon as she held a length lead to the wire over Winkle in the fourth race. Free Bid was another half length away in third place. Charlie Stevenson had Ariel Star off in front, followed by Baltee and Free Bid, with Winkle well off the pace for the first half mile of the 6-furlong distance.

Into the stretch Winkle moved fast on th rail and Ariel Star was all out to hold her margin of victory. Free Bid, after going wide, closed well again, but was no match for the others. The running time of 1:12 3-5 reflected a greatly improved track.

Kilstar Is Favored For Grand National

London, March 29 (AP).—Dorothy Paget's Kilstar today replaced Mrs. I. Strang's The Professor II as favorite for the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, April 5. Kilstar was quoted at 15 to 2 and The Professor at 9 to 1.

H. C. McNally's Royal Danieli was the third choice at 100 to 9. Best liked among the four American-owned eligibles was Mrs. Louis E. Stoddard's Milano at 20 to 1.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

I don't know whether to feel sorry for Art Brown or the stockholders of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, which controls the Bowie track. The fact is that Lovely Arthur will be on the Capitol Theater stage plunking the organ Monday afternoon. If he is a good boy, Carter Barron might allow him to be off on Preakness Day. D. Sterett Gittings is Maryland's oldest horseman; he's an octogenarian and his memory of a childhood spent around the thoroughbreds is a remarkably vivid one. His active participation in the sport was brilliant as one of the greatest amateur riders in the country. Now, as a director of the Maryland Jockey Club, he has lost none of his interest or enthusiasm for racing and particularly for the old Pimlico race course. All matters of traditional custom are referred to him for corroboration and approval. Pimlico's four golden days of racing this spring, starting with the Dixie Handicap and ending with the Golden Jubilee Preakness, prompted Mr. Gittings to remark that he had seen the second running of the Dixie back in 1871. "My earliest recollections," he said the other day, "include seeing Jimmy Rowe come out of the paddock on Harry Bassett for a walk-over in the Dixie. The race was inaugurated the year before as the Dinner Party Stakes, and in 1871 was run as the Reunion Stakes. A year later it received its present name of Dixie." Mr. Gittings contends that one of the greatest events in the history of Maryland racing was the Great Sweepstakes at Pimlico on October 24, 1877, when Parole defeated Ten Broeck and Tom Ochiltree. "One feature of the race I have never seen mentioned," said Mr. Gittings, "was that after Parole returned to the winner's circle Jockey Barrett was lifted to the old fence in front of the grandstand and his black cap with gold tassel was filled to the brim with money tossed by the enthusiastic crowd. I was standing right alongside of him and it was an amazing sight." Confucius say: If my good thing fail to win, I will shave.

First race—Fight On could be the right one in the day's opener. Gets in with only 108 pounds and I have reason to believe there will be a lot of run in this one. Discobolo belongs with this kind and is dangerous. Calling could forget to stop and prove a keen factor.

Second race—Headin Home appears nicely placed in this affair. Roberts will do the riding and I'm going to string along. Baked Bibesect has speed and may get a lot of help from Meade. Colonel Joe could be a threat from that inside post position.

Third race—Stormy Passage seems best of the 3-year-olds gathered for this distance test. Donoso is scheduled to do the booting. Jay Bee Dee has plenty of punch and will be close at the end. Sir Trapseth for the minor award.

Fourth race—White Samite, another mount for Meade, may take this event. This colt can come from way back and I believe he will be along in time. Blare has done about everything asked hereabouts and is the one for the top fellow to beat. Alzura for the show end.

Fifth race—Belmar Arra has plenty of speed and should go well in this company. Donoso is due to climb aboard and I see no reason for mistakes. Red Mantilla and Puro Oro for the place and show money.

Sixth race—Carnarvon has been raced into condition and should take a purse in this field. Seems capable of handling that 116 pounds. She's Right and Foxy Maude are a pair with plenty of foot and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Seventh race—Fore Isus deserves the call in this group. Has the speed and the class. Bailiwick has shown in and out form but must be considered with these. Goshen for the show.

Eighth race—White Eye could awake in the day's finale. Berger is slated to ride and I'm going to give this combination a chance to make good. Chicharra and Many Flags to take care of the others.

Best bet—Belmar Arra.

Man o' War Passes His 23d Birthday; Retains 'Glamour'

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., March 29.—Man o' War, America's most famed race horse, was 23 years old today.

Although considerably heavier than he was a score of years ago when he was beating down all opposition—he lost only one race in 21 starts—'Big Red" has lost none of his "glamour" and visitors still throng to Samuel D. Riddle's Faraway Farm to look at him. There was no fanfare about the anniversary today. He was given his customary early morning gallop and his regular menu of oats, bran, carrots and hay.

Owner Riddle, of Philadelphia, reported to have refused a million dollar offer for Man o' War, was here last month.

A race horse's age changes on January 1, but the foaling date of "Big Red"—March 29—is observed separately.

Scalzo Signs for 'Title' Fight Here; Perrin Sought as Foe

Archibald's Title Would Be at Stake

Proposed Date Is May 15; Perrin's Manager Asks 36 Hours to Decide

Pete Reilly, inventor of the "hot foot," the exploding self-starter and countless other practical jokes, came to town with his uncrowned featherweight champion, Petey Scalzo, yesterday and put his name on a contract for Promoter Joe Turner.

The signing was the first step in quest for a new National Boxing Association world's featherweight champion, Joey Archibald having been stripped of the crown Thursday.

Reilly agreed to bring Scalzo, the No. 1 N. B. A. contender who knocked out Archibald in two rounds, to Washington on a 25 per cent basis to fight May 15.

Turner already has opened negotiations with the No. 2 contender, Jimmy Perrin, in New Orleans. Perrin's managers, Emile Bruneau and Sam Weaver, were offered a 20 per cent cut of the gate and three roundtrip railroad tickets.

New Orleans Wants Bout

In a long-distance telephone conversation, they asked Turner to give them 36 hours before making an answer. New Orleans promoters, certain the fight will draw in the neighborhood of $20,000 there, are hot after Scalzo and N. B. A. officials to permit the fight to go there.

The N. B. A., however, insists on neutral territory for the first leg of the three-way battle for the now vacant title.

In putting his name on Turner's contract yesterday, Reilly said he prefers to see the bout in Washington.

"I'd rather see the fight here than any other place I know of, because I've always been given nice treatment in here and I believe all parties concerned will get every consideration," Reilly said.

Meanwhile, an unexpected hitch loomed as a possible obstacle to the Perrin-Scalzo battle.

Erwin Has Perrin

Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin, who launches his fight venture at Riverside stadium April 10 in competition with Turner, announced that he already has Perrin under contract to fight for him.

"I figured the outcome of this Archibald-Jeffra business and went ahead and signed Perrin as a sort of safety measure," Erwin said. "He called me from New Orleans last night and told me he wants to come to Washington but that he still is ready to fight for me April 24 or May 1."

Under the N. B. A.'s order declaring the featherweight title vacant, however, Scalzo may be declared the 126-pound champion without having to fight anybody.

"Should the leading contenders decline to box Scalzo, the N. B. A. may, as it did in the cases of Georgie Pace, bantamweight champion with his agreement to defend the title against any contender named by the N. B. A.," Heinie Miller, president, said.

The present arrangement calls for a Scalzo-Archibald fight with the winner meeting Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, in 90 days. The ultimate winner would be recognized as champion. Simon Chavez, of Venezuela, may also figure in the running.

Besides the knockout by Scalzo, Archibald has been beaten by both Perrin and Chavez. The Venezuelan, however, also has been beaten by Scalzo.

Meanwhile Jeffra and Archibald are to fight May 20 in Baltimore, the winner to get titular recognition only from New York and Maryland.

A Youngster and Veteran in Workout Roles at Huron Gym

Sammy Magro Impressive In Workout Against Wills

Birmingham Youth to Meet El Brookman April 10; Furr Also Works Against Wills

One of the boxing gentlemen helping Phil Furr get in shape for his Monday night date with Wild Bill McDowell in Turner's Arena probably will wake up with a very sore jaw this morning—but it won't be from Phil's pounding.

Furr, who has stepped into the list of the 10 outstanding welterweights in the Nation, went three fast rounds with Frankie Wills yesterday in the Huron gymnasium and did nobly by himself, but it was a 19-year-old high school boy from Birmingham, Ala., who is responsible for Frankie's sore jaw.

The youngster is Sammy Magro, who was a track and baseball star back in Birmingham, and who comes from a family of acrobats and tumblers.

Sammy does a lot of tumbling himself, but not in the ring. He's to be unveiled before Washington fans April 10 in the semifinal on Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin's show at Riverside Stadium.

May Be Threat

From the looks of things yesterday, Sammy may come along fast enough to be a threat to Furr before the summer's over.

The only rub is that Furr's fighting is being done for Promoter Joe Turner, while Magro, who has fought under Erwin's sponsorship in Birmingham, is going to continue same here.

Furr and Wills, both about the same build and height, slugged freely yesterday in their brief workout, and Phil's left hand was flicking with deadly accuracy through Wills' guard.

There was a noticeable fact about the workout, however. Wills was hitting Furr without much trouble, and Furr's punishment didn't seem to have much damaging effect upon Wills, whose face is seen in preliminaries at Turner's arena more often than not.

When Magro, fully a head shorter than Wills in the ring, stepped in, however, it was a different tale. He banged the Washington preliminary boy around, staggered him with a beautiful right and then dropped Wills into the ropes with the same blow. Frankie's knees buckled, and he was headed for the canvas. The workout was concluded at that point.

Frankie was in good shape, however. Trainers halted the business. If Magro can stagger an experienced lad such as Wills with 12-ounce "pillows" used in training, it looks like a bad night April 10 for El Brookman, who the Birmingham youngster meets in an eight-rounder.

As a matter of fact, Magro is a new threat to the District's crop of welterweights—Furr included. He's green and inexperienced, but his record shows a string of knockouts that shows one trait that gives him a wide advantage—an ability to punch.

Furr will wind up training for the McDowell ten-round battle at Turner's Arena Monday today with a light session in the Eleventh street gymnasium.

McDowell, handled by Bill Daly, manager of Pat Comiskey, will come to town from New York Saturday for what appears certain to be a fight before a sellout house.

Banneker Plans Game to Supply Sports Equipment

The Parent-Teachers Association of Banneker Junior High School will sponsor a basketball game between Virginia Union College, champions of the C. I. A. A., and the Recreation Collegians of the Banneker Center.

The proceeds from the game will be used in the purchase of athletic equipment for the school.

"Soup" Campbell will be featured in the Union line-up, while for the Collegians, Sidat Singh, is expected to carry the brunt of the battle.

In a preliminary game, Civil Service will engage Treasury.

Wayne College Natators Steal Show at Yale

Lumsden Captures 50-Yard Freestyle, Beating Army's Scofield

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., March 29.—Wayne College, of Detroit, Mich., displaying a couple of big-time swimmers in Guy Lumsden and Andy Clark, stole the show tonight as the two-day National Collegiate Championships opened in Yale's natatorium.

Lumsden captured the 50-yard free style title in a blanket finish, beating out Frank Scofield, of Army, and Charley Barker, of Michigan, the 1939 champion, and setting a new pool mark while he was about it.

The Wayne star's time of 23.1 seconds was one-tenth second better than the previous standard held jointly by Charley Hutter, of Harvard, and Ken Walter, of Iowa and Barker. Earlier today, in winning his way to the final, Lumsden equalled the tank record.

And as though inspired by his teammate's spectacular performance, Andy Clark, National A. A. U. medley champ, came up from nowhere to snatch second place in the 220-yard free style, won by Howard Johnson, Yale's sensational sophomore.

Johnson, finishing in 2:31.1, was 2 feet in front of Clark.

Al Vande Weghe, Princeton's ace, successfully defended his 150-yard backstroke N. C. A. A. title, winning by 8 feet over Francis Heydt, of Michigan, after leading all the way. His time was 1:34.6.

50-yard champ, was forced to withdraw tonight after qualifying this afternoon, due to a temperature.

The team fight between Michigan and Yale promises to go right down to the 400-yard relay tomorrow night, the final event. Other team scores were Princeton, 14; Wayne, 13; Army and Southern California, 4 each; Howard, 3; North Central and Kenyon, 2 each; Brown and Franklin and Marshall, 1 each.

Maki Defeats Four Ohio Stars In 2-Mile Race

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, March 29.—Taisto Maki, fleet-footed Finnish distance runner, covered 2 miles on an indoor track in 9 minutes 17.7 seconds tonight, defeating four Ohio College track stars in a Finnish relief exhibition race.

Maki's time, on a "slow" board track, was the fastest ever recorded here in the 2-mile indoor event. He lapped the whole field.

The Finnish flyer lapped Gilbert Dodds, Ashland College's Ohio Conference star, at the mile and a half mark.

Aaro Alapotl, a Miami University sophomore of Finnish extraction, set the pace for Maki in the first circuit but was lapped three times before the race was over.

Johnsen and Farrin Play in Finals Today

Top-seeded Davie Johnsen and third-seeded Lieut. James Farrin will meet at 11:45 this morning in the finals of the annual indoor tennis championships at the Y. M. C. A.

Johnsen and Farrin reached the finals by defeating Bob Bensinger and Hugh Lynch, respectively. The match was postponed a week because Farrin was out of town.

Maryland Nine Opens Home Season Today

Meets Dartmouth at College Park; Springer Slated to Pitch

Loser in two games to date, the University of Maryland baseball team will open its home season against Dartmouth at 3:30 today at College Park.

Coach Burton Shipley, anxious to get off on the right foot, plans to pitch his left-handed ace, Earl Springer, if the weather is favorable. Otherwise the assignment will go to either Lefty Leon Vannais or the orthodox Max Hunt, both sophomores.

The Terps, who lost to North Carolina and Virginia on their road trip last week, have been showing improvement in recent drills, but the infield is still unsettled. In an effort to bolster his team's attack Coach Shipley will replace Dick McHale at third base with Leib McDonald. Either Mearle Duvall or Arthur Burns will be the starting catcher. Maryland's batting order is expected to be: Fritz Maisel or Bill England, rightfield; McDonald, third base; Adam Bengoechea, second base; Hugh Keller, leftfield; Burton Culver, centerfield; Duvall or Burns, catcher; Arthur Rudy, first base; Jim Wharton, shortstop, and the pitcher.

Maisel will be in the game against righthanded pitching and England will face southpaws.

While the baseball team receives another test, Maryland lacrosse, tennis and trac squads will be tuning for engagements next week. The stickmen, beaten by Mount Washington in their first start, will be preparing for home matches with Dartmouth Monday, Harvard Thursday and Loyola, of Baltimore, Saturday.

The track team's immediate objective is its opening outdoor dual meet Saturday with V. P. I. at Blacksburg. The tennis squad will drill in Ritchie Coliseum for the invasion of William and Mary Thursday.

The diamondmen face a pair of home games next week, with Vermont Monday and Pittsburgh Saturday.

Four Maryland Stars Compete In Fla. Relays

By the Associated Press

Gainesville, Fla., March 29.—Nineteen Southern colleges and prep schools have entered track and field men in the second annual Florida relays which will get under way here tomorrow afternoon.

Competition will be divided into three classes—for universities and colleges, for freshmen and junior colleges, for high schools.

North Carolina, Auburn, Duke, Alabama, Georgia Tech, Maryland, Vanderbilt, Richmond and Florida will have entries in the five-relay events and eight individual competitions of the university and college class.

Four Terps Entered

Four "iron men" who will compete in three events in as many hours will represent the University of Maryland in the Florida relays tonight at Gainesville. The quartet of Alan Miller, Jim Kehoe, Mason Chronister and Tommy Fields will run in the mile, 2 miles and in a second mile race in which the first three runners to finish are counted on the cross-country scoring basis.

Navy Riflists Defend National Title Here

14 Strong College Teams in This Section Will Fire in Middle Atlantic Division; Maryland, George Washington, Georgetown Entered

Fourteen of this section's strongest college rifle teams will toe the firing line today at 10 G street northeast, as the Middle Atlantic division of the annual National Intercollegiate Matches are fired.

Navy, defending national champion and titlist in 1934, 1935 and 1937, will be the odds-on favorite but George Washington, 1938 crown-bearer, Carnegie Tech and Maryland have been conceded strong chances. Other more lightly regarded teams will be those of Georgetown, Pittsburgh, Penn State, Lehigh, V. M. I., V. P. I., Cornell, Brooklyn Poly, and Hofstra.

First action will be at 9:30 a. m., when the weaker teams go to the line. There will be an hour off for lunch, and at 1:30 the favorites start gun play with the Mid Atlantic and National Championships at stake. At 5 p. m., after team honors have been decided, individual firing will go on until far into the night.

While teams in this area are trying for the Mid Atlantic title, teams in six other sections throughout the country will be settling their championships. Scores will be telegraphed from one city to another, and the National winner thus ascertained.

Manor Rollers Set Season Team Record

1,855 Set by No. 1 Five Is Responsible For Sweep of Honors

Manor team No. 1 cracked the Country Club League season record for high team set last night at Lucky Strike Alleys with a total of 1,855, and at the same time captured almost every other honor for the evening's activity.

Ed Schlegel started things for Manor with an individual game of 168, Earl McPhilomy turned in a 405 set and the whole team combined for a 651 in its first game. The effort took the odd game from Indian Spring No. 3 and helped Manor to a tie for the league lead with Indian Spring No. 1.

Charley Nicholson, high average roller in the Navy Yard League, had game of 150 and set of 421 to pace F. and A. No. 1 to a two-out-of-three victory over Torpedo Tube No. 1. Miscellaneous increased its league lead to two full games when it took a pair from Broad Mount No. 1.

Arcadia

Mary Heine's game of 146 was easily high in the W. P. A. Mixed League. A 380 set by Maurry Evans was mainly instrumental in Transmittal's 584 game and Receiving won team honors with 1,633.

Vincent's Beauty Shop took both team highs in the Independent Ladies League, 550 and 1,591, with Maybelle Hering setting the pace with 138. E. Riefenberg, of Galliher and Huguely, had individual high set, 373.

Blozis to Pitch Lighter Shot in Garden Games

Holder of the world's indoor record for the 16-pound shotput, Al Blozis, Georgetown University sophomore, will seek new honors tomorrow night in the Finnish relief games at Madison Square Garden.

Blozis will compete against other topnotchers in a special event with 8-pound and 12-pound shots. The big youngster was proficient with both weights in high school and can be expected to turn in good efforts.

Georgetown's only other entry in the meet will be Phil Graves in the 1,000-yard invitation run.

Pocket-Billiard Veteran Runs 125 After Foe Breaks

New York, March 29 (AP).—Onofrio Lauri, veteran New York billiard player, hung up what was said to be a world record for tournament competition today when he defeated Peter Judice, 125 to 0, in 1 inning in the world pocket billiard championship.

Judice broke and then Lauri proceeded to run out the game. Ralph Greenleaf, former champion, held the previous record of 125 in 2 innings.

'The Hardest Hole on the Course'

Pro Shorey Picks Indian Spring 12th Despite Arguments

This is another of a series on the 19 golf clubs in Metropolitan Washington where the professional selects the hardest hole on the course. The twentieth and concluding story will deal with the hardest of the lot, from a consensus of opinion.

Less than a month on the job as club professional, Mel Shorey would ordinarily not have been the man to ask about the toughest golf hole on the Indian Spring course, something that can't be decided on a moment's notice.

But as a tournament-playing pro of some 20 years over a course that was the favorite layout of most of this section's golfers, Mel is well qualified on the merits of the various holes.

With the first nine now a mass of foundations, the selection is limited to the back, or second nine, that

Mel Shorey plays from the right trap that catches an erring second shot on the twelfth hole. The trap in front is a long one that extends across the fairway. Between trap and green is 50 yards of fairway, and over the green a bank

New Profit-Sharing Plan for 50,000 Aides Announced

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 29.—Net income of the International Harvester Co. for the fiscal year ended October 31, 1939, was $12,980,000, equal to $1.71 a share on the common. In the preceding fiscal year it was $18,472,000, or $3 a common share.

A two-fold savings and profit-sharing plan to reduce hazards of unemployment and old age for Harvester company employes was announced today by Sydney G. McAllister, president of the company.

The plan—known as the employes savings and extra compensation plan—will become effective May 1 and will apply to about 50,000 American and Canadian employes, but not to the managerial group. Under it an individual account will be created for every participating employe, those with three or more years or service receiving full benefits of the plan.

Into their accounts will go voluntary savings up to 10 per cent of salary or wages, which will be matched by the company up to a maximum of 5 per cent on a 50 per cent basis, or a maximum of 2½ per cent, plus interest and 25 per cent of company earnings in excess of $3 a share on the common stock.

Cotton Futures Move Unevenly; Trade Sluggish

New York, March 29 (AP).—The cotton futures market settled down within a narrow price range today after the rapid changes of recent sessions. Final prices were 2 points higher to 4 lower.

Even news from Worth street textile markets of an abrupt expansion in turnover after the stalemate of past weeks failed to stir the ring into more activity.

Losses were quickly recovered and when foreign pressure subsided, the list chugged ahead on trade and New Orleans support. Local offerings late in the day trimmed the top of the minor rally.

Sales totaled 138 lots; May, 6.50 bid; July 6.53 bid; September, 6.55 bid; October, 6.53 bid.

New York, March 29 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities revived somewhat during the week ended yesterday, totaling $45,640,374, the largest amount in four weeks, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

An increase in municipal financing was principally responsible for the rise in new offerings.

The bulk of the week's new issues, however, represented the replacement of existing debts by new securities. Only 15 per cent of the total was new capital.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, March 29.—Buyers in the stock market were encouraged by results of the allied war council meeting Thursday and prices moved quietly ahead. Most government bonds advanced ¼ point. In the foreign bond market Japanese loans rose briskly following a more conciliatory attitude by England in the Far East. Domestic rails overcame initial hesitancy. Kaffirs and diamonds were in demand but other mining issues moved unevenly. Selective buying propped the industrial list.

Paris—Profit-taking left the bourse with mixed price changes today despite an underlying bullish trend. Chief market influence was the Allies' announcement of "no separate peace," but market optimism was tempered by the forthcoming settlement.

Amsterdam—Losses in domestic issues ranged to 2 points today in a bourse affected by easiness in Wall street and current political uncertainties. American securities were narrowly uneven.

Liverpool—Speculative support checked early declines in cotton futures and the market closed 5 points lower to 4 higher.

Prices Hold Firm as Traders Await Definite Word From Washington; McKesson & Robbins Is a Feature

New York, March 29.—Securities were firm in tone today but quotations tetered within narrow limits with traders obviously awaiting some signal from Washington or Europe on which to base more aggressive commitments. The close was a trifle higher for both stocks and bonds.

Turnover on the Stock Exchange reached the respectable figure of 836,530 shares with 15 issues, however, accounting for more than a third of the total and many of these were issues selling below $10. Active shares on the whole showed unanimity on the up side.

Of the ten industrial and two rail groups, only two were shaded, the carrier equipments and the grade B rails. Of the 100 stocks, the extreme group loss was in the B rails —only .04 of a point, while on the other side of the market the best gain was by steels, up 0.26 point. The composite for the 100 stocks ended 0.9 point higher. Aircrafts closed with small losses.

McKesson Stock a Feature

Resumption of trading in the McKesson & Robbins issues, suspended since December 6, 1938, and prominence of low-priced power stocks were features of the day's share dealings. McKesson common opened on 1,000 shares at 6⅞ and worked up to a close of 7¾, or precisely the figure at which it sold nearly 16 months ago. It was the second most active stock with turnover of 40,900 shares. McKesson preferred also was in the most active list with 7,800 shares changing hands. Its close of 29¾, compared with a last previous sale at 36½ on December 5, 1938.

Loft at New High

While incentive for a broad general advance was lacking, sponsors of selected stocks found conditions favorable. Loft established a new high and finished with a gain of 1⅝. Lockheed at around its former high was up ⅝ and Curtiss-Wright A firmed half a point. Commonwealth & Southern, United Corporation, Columbia Gas & Electric and American Power & Light were among dollar stocks which made good progress.

Several stocks showed wide gains on a few sales, including Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred, up 9¾ to a new high at 104, and Dow Chemical with a 4½-point gain. Westinghouse Electric, duPont and Commonwealth & Southern preferred added a point or more each. Celotex preferred was active and 2½ ahead, while Spicer Manufacturing gained 2¾ and established a new top.

Report on Welles Awaited

General business news was fair, but Wall Street quite evidently wants to know something about the Welles tour of Europe before taking sides on the future of prices. General expectations are that President Roosevelt will make some official statement soon and that this will emphasize the poor prospect for peace, at least for some months. Such a development could stimulate speculative as well as investment activity.

On the other hand, one brokerage house points out that if the President does not make a definite report on the Welles visit, a feeling will obtain that something is going on under cover. As traders are great worriers and as the unknown factors are the greatest worries, this in turn might dampen bullish sentiment.

Wheat Closes Lower Despite Dust Damage

Ohio Valley Moisture Reports Dominate Price Movements

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 29. — Variable weather conditions continued to disturb the wheat market today but prices closed fractionally lower due to improved moisture conditions where soft winter and spring wheat are grown.

March winds kicked up clouds of dust in the hard winter wheat belt Southwest, attesting to dry soil conditions, but this caused only temporary price rallies interrupting the general downward trend. Moisture which fell in the spring wheat area, where planting will begin soon, and in the soft winter wheat zone from Missouri eastward along the Ohio valley, attracted most attention. Subsoil moisture reserves have been low in many portions of the Northwest. Rains also were reported in Nebraska and northern Kansas.

After being ¼@¾ cent higher early in the session, wheat fell 1⅛@1⅜ from these levels and closed ⅜@¾ lower than yesterday, with May, $1.04¼@$1.04⅜; July, $1.02⅜@$1.03. Corn was ⅛@⅜ off, May, 56½@56⅝; July, 57⅜; oats, ⅛@⅜ down; rye, ⅞@1¼ lower, and lard 3@10 lower.

Local Y.M.C.A. Five Defends Championship

Clash With Winner of Baltimore-Washington Game Tonight at 7:30

With one of its finest teams in years, the local Y. M. C. A. unlimited cage team today defends its Tri-State "Y" championship against clubs from Wilmington, Del., and Baltimore. The two out-of-town clubs clash this afternoon at 2 p. m. and the winner meets the local contingent at 7:30 tonight.

Because of its stellar record, Central "Y" will be favored to repeat its 1939 victory. The team boasted a highly successful season, capped by a one-point loss to Delaware and Hudson, Post-A. A. U. titlist.

No admission will be charged to either game, and the public is invited.

will remain intact while the other fairways become home sites. Three holes are standouts: the twelfth, a long par four with trouble and deception, the seventeenth, a multi-trapped par three that defies a full drive on a windy day, and the eighteenth, a back-breaking par four that has ruined many a sub-par score.

From this point it is almost like selecting one out of a hat. They all have points and we've already heard a score of opinions as to Indian Spring's toughest hole, with the three about even in popularity. But Shorey is firm in his choice of the twelfth hole, a 423-yard par four that borders the Colesville Pike, from the entrance to the club to Four Corners.

One of the best-trapped courses in this area, five of Indian Spring's biggest bunkers dot the twelfth hole, although the location of two of them is questionable. From the tee, a short slice or a long hook are greeted with seashore sand. Standing up to the second shot, the immediate problem is clearing a trap some 50 yards in front of the green, and staying out of one located directly opposite, leaving a narrow entrance.

The road is out of bounds to the left but only the vicious hooker is troubled, and if the ball leaves the fairway the trap or deep rough usually takes care of it before it reaches the macadam. A good drive will clear the brow of the hill by just enough yardage to leave a downhill shot for a second.

Then the problem is lifting the ball from the downhill lie high enough to escape the traps that extend across the fairway and right rough. The green is clear on all sides but beyond a bank drops several feet and leaves a mean shot back. Front, left and right a short fairway fringe extends to the rough.

At this time of year, the hole is played with two wood shots, but when the fairway is better and the ball gets more roll, good golfers use a five or six iron. The distance from the trap in front of the green is deceiving as it is flat, and many a shot leaves the club labeled "stony" that falls short of its objective. The green is oval, with a small terrace. For all the pro tournaments played at Indian Spring, we'll give you a quarter for the total pars and birdies, if you'll reciprocate for bogeys.

Inside and out, owner A. S. Kay has signed checks well up into the thousands for improvements. A new shop, new bar and grille, new road, more terrace space, additional tennis courts, new showers and a new golf shop are among the improvements.

Nine more tees are being added to the nine holes, and the holes will play different the second time around. Par will be 72 and the yardage 6,637. And to still all rumors, the owner and committees restate that it's strictly private for its goal of 450 members in the two classes.

Indians Win

Columbus, Ga., March 29 (AP).—Capitalizing five errors, the Cleveland Indians defeated Columbus, Ga., of the South Atlantic League 8 to 1 today.

Johnny Humphries yielded three hits but no runs in five innings. The Red Birds, league champions, got their only run in the seventh while Joe Dobson, making his first appearance in two weeks because of a flu attack, was on the mound. Dobson allowed four hits in three innings and was replaced by Ken Jungels, who held the birds to one hit in the inning he pitched.

Indiana U. After Okla. Mat Title

Hoosiers Place Six Men in Semifinals Of N. C. A. A. Tourney

By the Associated Press

Champaign, Ill., March 29.—Indiana University marked itself as a dangerous contender for the Oklahoma Aggies' N. C. A. A. wrestling title tonight by qualifying six men for the semi-finals in the annual tournament.

All members of the Hoosiers' six-man team survived the first and second rounds of competition while three Oklahoma Aggie grapplers were defeated, leaving the defending champions still with five men ready for the semi-finals.

The semi-final and final rounds of wrestling will be run off tomorrow.

Michigan, runner up to Indiana in the Big Ten wrestling meet, was third, qualifying three grapplers.

Iowa State sends two men into the semi-finals as do Kansas State, and Lehigh, Eastern intercollegiate champion. The following schools qualified one man each: Purdue, Minnesota, Oklahoma University, Iowa State Teachers, Franklin and Marshall, Lafayette, Colorado State, Appalachian State Teachers College of Boone, N. C.; Illinois, Syracuse, Ohio State and Kent State.

Mel Bruno, 145-pound wrestler from San Jose (California) State College, suffered a broken arm in his bout with Gene Farrell, of Iowa State, and was forced to forfeit.

Dutch Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark., with 69s.

Metz's 30 was an amazing exhibition. After starting off with a par, he birdied the next four holes, two of them par 5s, and topped that off with an eagle 3 on the 484-yard eighth. He hit the green there with his second shot, and rolled in a 25-foot putt. Guldahl, out in 32 and back in the same, as was Mangrum, was the only man without a 5 on his card. The former Open champion had eleven 4s, six 3s and a deuce.

Leo Walper, Washington professional, posted a subpar 69 to tie three others in thirteenth place. Walper was "hot" on the first nine, turning in a 33, and came home with a 36 for his 1-under-par total.

Postscripts . . .

Orlando, Fla., March 29.—Clark Griffith masticated four cigars in a vain attempt to root a run home for the Nats this afternoon . . . he was heckling the Giants from a box seat throughout the ball game . . . Zeke Bonura tried vainly to sell himself to the Boston Bees yesterday before signing with the Giants . . . Dutch Leonard's fielding ability stood him in good stead in the sixth inning today . . . with two Giants on base and none out, he grabbed a hot shot off Jurges' bat, wheeled and threw to second from which point Jimmy Bloodworth completed a double-play . . . Jimmy Pofahl proved that he could go to his left in the second inning when he went far behind second base to snatch Ott's grounder and throw him out . . . on the next pitch, Pofahl proved that he could go far to his right by throwing out Harry Danning . . . There was not much doubt that Pofahl was the fielding star of that inning . . . Bucky Harris was not too highly pained by the fact that Harry Danning belted Jim Dean's third pitch of the game for a three-bagger . . . "The best pitchers in the big leagues have had trouble with Danning for a long time," observed Harris philosophically . . . Burgess Whitehead paid utterly no attention to Third Base Coach Bill Terry in the seventh inning and heedlessly attempted to score from second on Gumbert's short single to right . . . Buddy Lewis threw him out from here to there . . . Jimmy Pofahl was in Jurges' way all afternoon . . . in the first and fourth innings he caught line drives off Jurges' hat and in the sixth he threw him out on a hot grounder . . . Clark Griffith excuses the Nats for their light hitting in their Orlando games, declaring "Those hedges in centerfield give the hitters the worst background I've ever seen." Tomorrow the Nats take a 143-mile ride to Bradenton to meet the Boston Bees . . . Joe Krakauskas and Rookie Walter Masterson will divide the pitching job for the Nats . . . Attendance at the Nats' Orlando games this spring has surpassed any other year and the Orlando Chamber of Commerce may yet break even on the $3,500 guarantee they gave the Washington club.—POVICH.

Census Takers to Devote April 8 to Transients

If you're overnighting on April 8 at a one-night lodging, tourist camp or hotel and someone knocks on your door, it's not bad news from home nor a bell boy with ice water.

It's the census taker, who, the Census Bureau said yesterday, will count transient population on that day. The enumerators will call at hotels, tourist camps, one-night lodging houses, and even "flop houses" to make the 1940 census as accurate as possible.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The Deschapelles Cup, named for the great one-armed whist player is as bold a bit of strategy as ever witnessed in real warfare. It is the deliberate sacrifice of a king or other honor to establish an entry to partner's hand. The player making the Deschapelles coup must lead his unsupported honor himself, deliberately offering it to the guillotine. Even in contract the accomplishment of this play is a great feat, but at whist, when all hands were closed and a player had to depend entirely on inferences, it was a stroke of genius.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

	♠ A K J 7 ♡ 9 8 7 ◇ 8 7 5 3 ♣ A J
♠ 10 9 8 5 ♡ K Q J 10 5 3 ◇ None ♣ Q 7 4	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ Q 4 3 2 ♡ 2 ◇ J 10 9 2 ♣ K 5 3 2
	♠ 6 ♡ A 6 4 ◇ A K Q 6 4 ♣ 10 9 8 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	3 ♡	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♡.

Today's hand, noted by Mr. Coffin at a progressive bridge party, is a fine example of the Deschapelles coup. In describing it in his book, "Endplays," he says:

"West opened with the king of hearts, which South passed. West continued with the ten of hearts, which South topped with his ace. The game looked 90 per cent certain until West discarded a spade when South led a diamond honor. In order to preserve a diamond entry to his own hand and thus to score his long diamond later, South played another honor, then low in diamonds, throwing in East. At this point East made the Deschapelles coup: He led his unsupported king of clubs up to the teeth of dummy's ace-jack. Naively believing this lead to be from king-queen, declarer won the trick with dummy's ace of clubs (it would have done him no good to duck), and in order to set up all his own clubs he returned the dummy's jack. But West pounced thereon with the queen and scored four more heart tricks, defeating the contract by three tricks."

Listen! with Slocum

Jerome Harriman, colorful press representative with the Wirth's Circus which will perform in Washington April 15—21 for the benefit of Children's Hospital, will discuss the stories of the circus stars who are coming down with Wirth, this morning at 9:45 over station WJSV.

Rear Admiral C. R. Train, retired, and Mrs. William Flather, both playing major roles in this charity enterprise, will also be heard on the program.

It's stage stars . . . screen stars . . . dramatic stars . . . revue stars . . radio stars and composer stars for Columbia network's "Pursuit of Happiness" on Sunday over WJSV at 4:30 p. m.

Director Norman Corwin has given stage-screen-radio star Burgess Meredith a busy afternoon of conducting the ceremonies in a program which includes in order:

Diosa Costello, of "Too Many Girls" singing a new rhumba from the imaginative musical pen of Earl Robinson.

Next Elliott Nugent, currently in "The Male Animal," appears in a Ring Lardner skit, "Symptoms of Being 35" as adapted by Vera Eikal.

Katherine Mattern and Walter Martin then contribute the "Laughing Scene" from New York's popular "Reunion in New York."

The climax of the program is the appearance of screen star Nancy Carroll in a dramatic skit, as yet untitled.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

Inspector Cramer was getting madder, and neither Nero Wolfe's soothing remarks nor Archie Goodwin's innocent taunts could placate him. Cramer thought they were both hiding important clues from him that would help pin the murders of Percy Ludlow, British secret agent, and Rudolph Faber, German secret agent, on one or more persons. Although Cramer was holding Neya Tormic, Wolfe's client, at headquarters, he had about decided she was innocent because he figured she wouldn't kill Faber on whom her alibi for the first murder depended. But no one could find Zorka, who had disappeared for the second time, and there were no reports from Cramer's man who was shadowing Carla Louchen, who also had not turned up anywhere.

Chapter 25

"I SEE. It's very handy to have so many men."

"Yeah. It would be if more of them were worth a damn. There are over 100 of them on this case right now. Sifting out up at Thirty-eighth street. Looking for the thing he was stabbed with. Getting backgrounds. Tailing. Looking for Louchen and Zorka. Checking alibis. I'm expecting any minute to be told to pull a bunch of them off. Hush-hush." The inspector set his jaw. "But until I get direct orders to the contrary, I'm going to proceed on the theory that the people who pay my salary don't want any kind of murderer to get any kind of a break. That's why I'm sitting here chinning with you. This is the one place where I might get a line on whatever it is that the goddam consuls and ambassadors are so bashful about . . . much obliged."

He took the beer Wolfe had poured for him, gulped, licked the foam from his lips and gulped again.

He sat back holding the half-filled glass. "Let me ask you something. If you had your pick of everybody, everybody in or near New York, to be brought in here right now, for you to ask questions of about this case, who would it be?"

"Thank heaven," Wolfe declared, "I can answer that unequivocally. Madame Zorka."

The phone rang. It was for Cramer again and he took it at my desk. It was a short conversation this time, and when he disconnected and went back to his chair he had a satisfied grin on his mug.

"Well, well," he said, "I call that pretty good. No sooner asked for. They've got Zorka and I told them to bring her here."

"Indeed." Wolfe was filling his glass again. "Where did they find her?"

"In a room at the Brissenden. Registered phoney. Arrived at ten minutes past five this morning."

"I hope," Wolfe muttered, "that she has something to wear besides that red thing she had on last night."

"Huh?" I beg your pardon?"

"Nothing. Soliloquy—Yes, Fritz?"

Fritz was in again. He had the salver this time, and crossed to Wolfe. Wolfe took the card, read it and frowned.

"The devil," he said. "Where is he?"

"In the hall, sir."

"Please put him in the front room, close the door, and come back."

As Fritz went Wolfe addressed the inspector:

"I don't suppose you have an errand somewhere else."

"Neither do I," Cramer said emphatically. "I've told you ten times I like it here. If I once got out you might not let me in again unless I brought a warrant."

"Very well. Then I'm afraid—Oh, Fritz. Will you please take Mr. Cramer up in the elevator and ask Theodore to show him the orchids?" He smiled at the inspector. "You haven't been up there for a long while. I'm sure you'll enjoy it."

"I'll love it," Cramer declared, and got up and followed Fritz out.

Wolfe handed me the card and I read, "John P. Barrett."

The sound came of the elevator door clanging, and Wolfe said, "Bring him in."

THE APPEARANCE of Donnybonny's father in the flesh fitted the sound of his voice on the telephone. He was the kind many people call distinguished-looking and I call headwaiter's dream. He was around 50, smooth shaven, with gray eyes that needed to look only once at something, and was wearing $485 worth of quiet clothes. He shook hands with Wolfe in a pleasant manner, as if there could never be any hurry or urgency about anything in the world.

"You're over here by the river in a corner of your own," he observed genially as he sat down.

Wolfe nodded. "Yes, I bought this place a long time ago and I'm hard to move. You must excuse me, Mr. Barrett, if I say that I haven't much time to spare. I'm wedging you in. Another caller kindly went up to my plant rooms for an interlude. Mr. Cramer of the police."

"Cramer?"

"Inspector Cramer of the Homicide Bureau."

"Oh." Barrett's tone was nonchalant but his eyes, for an instant, were not. "I came to see you on account of some remarks you made last night to my son. Regarding Bosnian forests, credits held by my firm and the Donevitch gang. That was your word, I believe—gang."

"I believe it was," Wolfe admitted. "Was there somethig wrong with my remarks?"

"Oh, no. Nothing wrong. May I smoke?"

Permission received, he got a cigarette from a case which boosted his freight loading from the $485 up to around 800 berries, lit, and thanked me for the ash tray I provided.

"My son," he said in a tone of civilized exasperation, "is a little bit green. It's unavoidable that youth should arrange people in categories; it's the only way of handling the mass of material at first to avoid hopeless confusion, but the sorting out should not be too long delayed. My son seems ta be pretty slow at it. He overrates some people and underrates others. Perhaps I've tried to rush it by opening too many doors for him. A father's conceit can be a very disastrous thing."

He tapped ashes from his cigarette. He asked abruptly but not at all pugnaciously, "What is it you want, Mr. Wolfe?"

Wolfe shook his head. "Nothing right now. I wanted to see Mme. Zorka, and your son kindly made that possible."

"Yes, he told me about that. But what else?"

"Nothing at present. Really."

"Well." Barrett smiled. "I understand that as a private investigator you undertake almost any sort of job that promises a fee proportionate to your abilities."

"Yes, sir, I do. Within certain boundaries I have set. I try to keep my prejudices intact."

"Naturally." Barrett laughed sympathetically. "We can't leave it to anyone else to defend our prejudices for us." He tapped off ashes again. "My son also tells me that you are engaged in the interests of a young woman named Tormic who is a friend of his. At least—hum—an acquaintance. In connection with the murder of that man Ludlow."

"THAT'S RIGHT," Wolfe agreed. "I was originally engaged to clear her of a charge of stealing diamonds from a man named Driscoll. Then Mr. Ludlow got killed, and Miss Tormic needed a little help on that too because she was implicated by circumstances."

"And was it from this Miss Tormic that you received information which enabled you to put pressure on my son? You did put pressure on him, didn't you?"

"Certainly. I blackmailed him."

"Yes. With a threat to disclose certain facts. Did you get those facts from Miss Tormic?"

"My dear sir." Wolfe wiggled a finger at him. "You can't possibly be fatuous enough to expect me to tell you that."

Barrett smiled at him. "There's always a chance that you might. Especially since there's no good reason why you shouldn't. Are you under obligation to defend the interests of anyone except Miss Tormic?"

"Yes. My own. Always my own."

"That, of course. But anyone else? I should think there would be no impropriety in your telling me if you represent any interest except that of Miss Tormic. For instance, Madame Zorka?"

Wolfe frowned. "I am always reluctant to make a present of information. Just as you are reluctant to make a present of money. You're a banker and your business is selling money; I'm a detective and mine is selling information. But I don't want to be churlish. In connection with the activities we are speaking of, I represent no interest whatever except that of Miss Tormic."

"And, always, your own."

"Always my own."

"Good." Barrett crushed his cigarette in the tray. "That clears the way for us, I should think. Please don't think I'm fatuous. I've made some inquiries and I find you have an enviable reputation for good faith. I have a proposal to make regarding this little project my firm is interested in. This—um—business you mentioned to my son. We need your services. Nothing onerous, and certainly nothing to offend your prejudices." He pulled a little leather fold from his pocket. "I'll give you a check now as a retainer. Say $10,000.

I thought to myself, what do you know about that; Donnydarling got his briber's itch honestly, by direct inheritance. Then I grinned, looking at Wolfe. One corner of his mouth was twisted a little out of line, which meant that he was suffering acute pain. It was a situation he had had to face fairly often during the years I had known him, and the torture involved was in direct proportion to the number of ciphers. Ten thousand bucks would have kept a good man, even Ray Borchers, in Central America for a full year, hunting rare orchids, always with the possibility of finding one absolutely new. Or 5,000 cases of beer or 600 pounds of caviar . . .

He said bravely, but with somewhat more breath than the word should require, "No."

"No?"

"No."

"IF I ASSURE you that you will be expected to do nothing that will interfere with the interest you already represent? And in case my assurance doesn't satisfy you, if at any time you find your engagements in conflict you may merely return the $10,000——"

Wolfe's lip twitched. I turned my head away. But his voice showed that he had it licked: "No sir. To return that amount of money would ruin my digestion for a week. If I could bring myself to do it, which is doubtul. No, sir. Abandon the idea. I shall accept no commission or retainer from you."

"Is that—um—definite?"

"Irrevocable."

One little vertical crease showed in the middle of Barrett's forehead. With no other sign of fits, he returned the leather fold to his breast pocket, and then regarded Wolfe with what was probably as close to an open stare as he ever got.

"The only recourse that leaves me," he said, with no affability left in his tone at all, "is to draw my own conclusions."

"If you find you must have a conclusion, yes, sir."

"But I confess I'm puzzled. I'm not often puzzled, but I am now. I'm not gullible enough to believe that your interest is only what you profess it to be. I have very good reasons for not believing it besides the fact that in that case there would be no explanations for your refusing my proposal. My son thinks that you are representing either London or Rome, but there are two objections to that: first, no contacts have been reported to us, and second, if that were true why would you have exposed yourself as you did last night? Is it any wonder that we regarded that as an invitation to deal?"

"I'm sorry I misled you," Wolfe murmured.

"But you're not going to tell me whom you're tied up with."

"I have no client but Miss Tormic."

"And you're not prepared to deal with us."

Wolfe shook his head, if not with enthusiasm, with finality.

John P. Barrett stood up. There was a vague sort of vexation on his face, like a man with a feeling that he has gone off and left something somewhere but unable to say either what it was or where he left it.

"I hope," he said, with an edge to his tone, "for your own sake, that you don't happen to get in our way unwittingly. We know who our opponents are, and we know how to handle them. If you're in this on your own and you're trying to play for a haul——"

"Nonsense." Wolfe cut him off. "I'm a detective working on a job. I am not apt to get in anyone's way, or perform any other maneuver, unwittingly. I will say this. There is a possibility that in finishing up my own business I'll be compelled to interfere with yours. If that seems likely to occur, I'll let you know in advance."
